Koritza Reported Captured By Greeks; Italians Flee

Retreat Said Carried Out Under Cover of Heavy Artillery Fire

Salonika, Nov. 17.

GREEK messages received here assert that the Greek Army has captured Koritza, and that the Italian Army is continuing its retreat in the Koritza sector.

Italian heavy artillery is reported to be pounding the Greeks to cover the Italian retreat.

Favourable reports continued to reach Salonika from Greek field headquarters and Greek military circles. These sources promised foreign correspondents here "some good news" within the next two days. (Two lines censored here).

No Italian offensive was expected this week, because Italians must first replace a large portion of heavy artillery abandoned in the general retreat, informed quarters said.

The Greek encircling movement was continuing and many additional Italian prisoners had been captured as a result, reports from the front declared. Several hundred Italian prisoners passed through Salonika during the last forty-eight hours.—United Press.

Fall Believed "Imminent"

Athens, Nov. 17.

The fall of Koritza, strategic Italian concentration point in Albania, was believed imminent as the Greeks today continued their relentless push against the Italians.

According to some sources, the question was no longer whether the town would be taken but when it would be taken. Optimists even hoped that large forces inside the city also would be captured.

A long column of cars and lorries was seen last night on the Valona road leading from Koritza, and it was believed to be a sign that the Italians were preparing to evacuate. Greek and British aircraft severely bombed the column.

Another road leading to Koritza has been cut, while a 6,000-feet peak from which Koritza can be bombarded has been captured. Four heavy guns were taken on one of the heights captured by the Greeks.

Greek Watchword Is Speed

Anxious to take every ounce of profit from the present Italian ineffectiveness, the Greeks on all fronts have adopted speed as their watchword, even doing without sleep so as to lose no opportunity of hitting the enemy.

The troops who yesterday took Konitsa have advanced into Albania, and also in the Pindus sector the Greeks have pushed into Albania between Grammes and Toletta.

Meanwhile, Italy is reported to be hastily reorganizing her forces [Reuter.

Koritza Said Among Many R.A.F. Targets

British Raiders Active In Middle East

Cairo, Nov. 17.

Numerous actions in the Middle East, including further action in support of Greek resistance to the Italian army, is reported in the latest R.A.F. communique issued here.

R.A.F. bombing aircraft, says the communique, "again attacked enemy positions to the north-east of Koritza yesterday. Bombs fell on the target area, starting several fires. Full details of damage caused to enemy personnel could not be observed.

"Our aircraft were attacked by a number of enemy fighters, resulting in the loss of one of our machines and serious damage to one of the enemy fighters.

"In Libya, a series of raids was carried out on enemy aerodromes at Sollum, Sidi Barrani, Bardia, Bomba and Tobruk. Dispersed aircraft on the ground was the main objective, and at Sollum bombs fell among aircraft on the ground, inflicting considerable damage.

Seaplanes Hit

"At Sidi Barrani one enemy bomber was destroyed. At Bomba bombs fell among seaplanes at a slipway and a building was set on fire, while at Bardia violent explosions were caused.

"In Italian East Africa, Kassala railway station and neighbouring buildings were raided, many bombs falling in the target area.

Rome Claims Raids On Greece, Africa

Italian Forces Declared "Continuing to Oppose" Greek Defenders

Rome, Nov. 17.

Italian planes yesterday bombed concentrations of troops and roads in Greece, the Italian High Command said yesterday in an official communique.

The airport at Larissa was bombed, and two Blenheim type aeroplanes were destroyed and others damaged, the communique claimed. Nine British planes of various types were shot down, the communique continued.

Italian forces continued to oppose Greek troops in infantry and artillery actions, yesterday, the communique said.

The Greek naval base at Narravino was bombed, the High Command stated.

In North Africa Italian planes machine-gunned defences and aero-naval installations, the communique announced.

Marsamatruh and the railway station in that town were bombed, as well as naval bases at Alexandria, it was asserted. The towns of Maaeten and Bagush and their rail facilities were bombed, causing fires, Rome declared.

Destroyer Claimed Sunk

"One of our submarines operating in the Atlantic sank a British destroyer," the Italian communique said.

Italian aviation bombed British artillery defences west of Gallabat in East Africa, the communique said.

British planes bombed Kassala and Assab without results, as well as Diredawa where slight damage was caused, but no casualties, the communique said.

"British aviation carried out air raids on Dir Sofan, Sidi Barrani, Solum and Bardia causing neither casualties, nor damage," the communique said.

"British planes carried out air raids with many planes on Brindisi, Italy, during the nights of November 15 and 16. Quick and effective anti-aircraft reaction prevented bombs from being dropped on residential districts, but a number of bombs fell into the sea, and in open country, demolishing one house and causing several small fires which were immediately controlled. One British plane was shot down and probably two others were hit by anti-aircraft defences. There were no casualties," the communique concluded.—United Press.

Alexandria Bombed

Cairo, Nov. 17.

Seven civilians were injured and slight damage to private property was caused when Italian planes dropped bombs on the Alexandria area on Friday night, according to an official communique.—Reuter.

How Air Raids Check Italian Attacks

This map shows roughly how British and Greek air raids have held up the Italian offensives on Greece. The Italian "invasion ports" at Bari and Brindisi and other places along the coast have been heavily bombed, while the naval base at Taranto has been temporarily put out of action. Durazzo, Valona, and other small ports on the Albanian coast, which housed Italian stores and were used as disembarkation centres, have been heavily attacked. Durazzo harbour facilities are said to have been gutted. The three directions along which the Greeks have been successfully counter-attacking are also indicated.

British Use New Weapon For Air Attacks

Proved Highly Successful At Taranto

Alexandria, Nov. 17.

British war planes used a new secret weapon during their devastating attack on the Italian port of Taranto, authorities announced here yesterday.

The nature of the weapon was not revealed but officials said results of its first large scale trial were more satisfactory than they had originally hoped.

The discovery will revolutionize air attacks against warships, authorities believed.

The British aerial attack on Taranto crippled some of Italy's greatest battleships and materially reduced Italian naval strength, British authorities previously had announced.—United Press.

"On the night of November 14-15, motor transport, garages and workshops at Asmara were bombarded, but weather conditions prevented an accurate estimate of the damage.

"Diredawa and Assab were also raided successfully. The railway bridge at Harar suffered two direct hits.

Many Flights Made

"Numerous reconnaissance flights were carried out over enemy territory in all war areas. Lavello was raided for the seventh time on the morning of Thursday, and a further raid was carried out on the night of November 14-15 by aircraft of the South African Air Force."

From these varied operations, except one in northern Greece, all British aircraft returned safely to their bases."

British mechanized patrols have again been active in the Gallabat area, and British artillery is successfully continuing its harassing fire on Italian positions in Metemma, according to a communique issued by the General Headquarters here.

On the Metemma landing ground, British artillery is claimed to have destroyed one and seriously damaged another enemy aircraft.

There was no change in the situation on all other fronts.—Reuter.

Italian Port Bombarded

London, Nov. 17.

British light forces carried out a naval bombardment of Mogadishu, main port in Italian Somaliland, it is announced by the Admiralty.

Direct hits were scored on targets ashore and on shipping lying in the port. Italian shore batteries replied ineffectively; no casualties or damage were suffered by British forces.

Mogadishu is the seat of the Government in Italian Somaliland and has a population of 20,000. Several hundreds of Italian motor vehicles were destroyed by South African Air Force raids on Mogadishu on August 29.—Reuter.

Long Winter Underwear Urged Upon People of Sunny Italy

Stratagem Expected to Reduce Coal Consumption; Experiments Done on Esatz "Woollies"

Rome, Nov. 17.

Department stores and haberdashers yesterday began an advertising campaign to encourage wearing of long woollen underwear because of a coal shortage.

If the campaign is successful, and many think it will be, men, women and children of sunny Italy will be wearing the "longies" for the first time in their lives.

Authorities are encouraging the campaign because they believe Italians will burn less coal to keep warm if the underwear does its job properly.

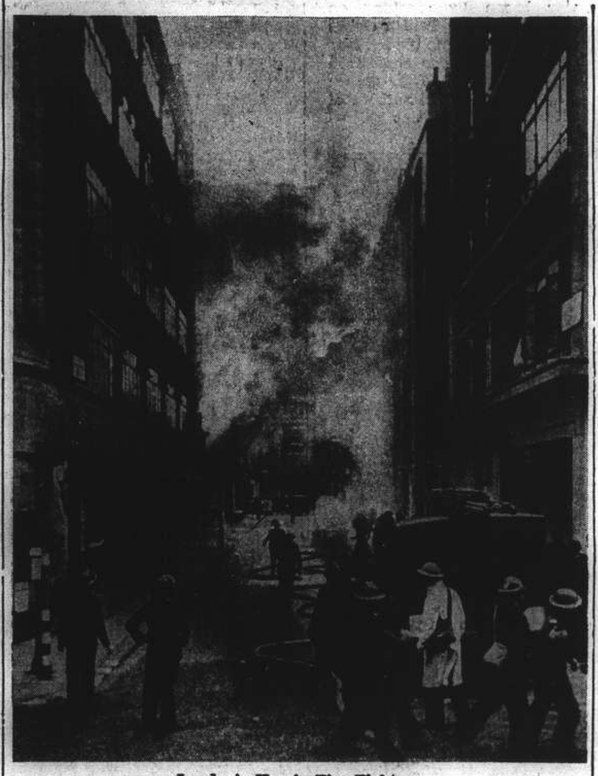
Although pre-war Italy experimented extensively with ersatz woollens for domestic use, there is believed to be an unlimited supply of genuine woollen goods available for long winter underwear.

The Government, it is understood, has ordered a textile syndicate to turn out a large stock of underwear in order to supply everyone willing to wear the woollens and cut their consumption of coal.—United Press.

Malta Thanked for Gift Of Fighter Craft

London, Nov. 17.

The following telegram has been sent by Lord Beaverbrook to the Anglo-Maltese League: "Two fighter aircraft named Malta and Ghawdex will now take to the skies, sure symbols of Malta's devotion to the Empire's cause and her determination to strike down forever the ugly forces of aggression that seek to dominate the world. From the island of Britain we send to the island of Malta this expression of our deepest gratitude and admiration. Our common sufferings in the cause of freedom will knit closer the ties that bind us, and your valour in face of odds brings us fresh inspiration."—British Official Wireless.



London's Heroic Fire-Fighters

This picture was taken four minutes after an incendiary bomb set fire to a Central London clothing factory in which twenty girls were working at the time. Only one was seriously injured. Air Raid Wardens are seen moving people away and the Auxiliary Fire Service is already carrying hose to the blaze. Men of these services have been working heroically through bombs and falling shrapnel to minimize loss of life and material damage.

German Captains Claim Ships Chased by British Warcraft

Master of Scuttled Steamer Tells Tampico Port Authorities Surrender Demanded

Tampico, Nov. 17.

FOUR warships, believed to be either Royal Navy or Canadian, drove three German vessels back into the Panuco river here early yesterday, while a fourth Nazi steamer was scuttled to escape capture. The captains of the German vessels testified to port authorities that the warships pursued them inside Mexican territorial waters. They claimed they were saved only by intervention of a Mexican gunboat.

The captain of the scuttled steamer said he ordered his ship scuttled when escape was impossible.

The German officers said they were unable to distinguish whether the warships were Canadian. Their testimony was believed to have discredited earlier reports from reliable sources that the German vessels were frightened by American destroyers on a "curiosity cruise" of Mexican territorial waters.

The four vessels, the Orinoco, Rhein, Idarwald and Phrygia, had been in refuge 10 miles up the Panuco river near Tampico, an oil refining centre, since the German invasion of Poland. On Friday night they made a sudden dash for the sea. Rumours were current that they were going to refuel German submarines in the Atlantic and thousands of persons lined the shore to watch the vessels' departure.

Surrender Said Asked

Captain Heinrich Froemke, of the Idarwald, said one of the pursuing destroyers, using light signals in the darkness before dawn on Saturday, demanded his surrender.

Captain Froemke said he refused to surrender and zigzagged toward the river mouth. The destroyer chased his vessel to within two miles of the Mexican coast, he said.

Captain Elnno Ulliferf, of the Rhein told port authorities he saw lights of a large warship sending code signals to destroyers. He ordered his vessel put about and headed for the Panuco river.

When nearly to the river, said the Captain, warships tried to intercept him but the Mexican gunboat Querc-

Japanese Officer Dies from Wounds

Pearce Apartment Flats Searched; Quinsan Park Incident

Sergeant-Major Mitsugu Tominaga the Japanese warrant officer who was shot and critically wounded in front of the Japanese Club on Bubbling Well Road by an unknown assailant on Saturday afternoon, was reported to have succumbed to his wounds in the Shinozaki Hospital early yesterday morning.

Soon after the shooting Japanese blue-jackets threw a cordon around a section of Hongkew between Chapoo Road and the North Szechuen Road bridge as a result of which approximately 200 Chinese found themselves isolated from the outside world. The situation assumed serious proportions at about 9 p.m. on Saturday when a mob made a frenzied attempt to rush past the naval sentry on Chapoo Road. In the confusion the sentry fired a shot accidentally at the mob killing one Chinese and wounding four others. Outside help could not be sent to the wounded men at the time.

More than 300 Chinese were herded together in the Quinsan Park yesterday morning following the disturbances. Japanese gendarmes closed the front and rear entrances to the Pearce Apartments after making a systematic search of all the flats in the place.

London Population Made More Determined by Nazi Raids

Terrific Damage Causes Many Inconveniences; Communications Delayed; Nights in Shelters

DETAILS of some of the damage done by German raiders in the first week of the concentrated attacks on London, and an idea of some of the inconveniences caused to City workers are contained in a letter dated September 17, and just received in Shanghai.

Despite the nerve-wracking experiences and the enormous destruction, the partial disruption of communications and Post Office difficulties, there was not the slightest sign of panic or despondency among the population, however, the writer of the letter confirms. Rather, there was an increase in the determination for victory. Extracts from the letter follow:—

Fearing that when you received the Press cables telling of the serious bombing raids on London both by day and night which started exactly ten days ago you would probably be in considerable anxiety as to the position here, we thought it as well to cable you as per our message of the 12th instant reading:—

Glad to report all well but considerable dislocation mails and communications.

On the night of Saturday, 7th instant, the Germans unloosed an indiscriminate bombing attack on London by night, made utterly without any military objectives and with the sole object of doing as much damage to property and killing as many civilians as they could.

Not Expected

The first attack began before dark and apparently was not expected, as the German planes got right over London and by dropping incendiary as well as high explosive bombs started fires which were an excellent guide to them in their later mass attacks after dark. Similar tactics were pursued on Sunday and again on Monday and Tuesday, and unfortunately there is no doubt at all as to the great amount of damage done.

The chief sufferers were the poorer districts in the East End, the Docks and part of the City, but bombs fell as far west as Buckingham Palace, Piccadilly, Regent Street, the Burlington Arcade and the poorer districts in the neighbourhood of King's Cross. That station itself was not damaged, but some damage was done at Waterloo. Bombs also fell in the suburbs both north, south and east, all in purely residential districts. The noise of the planes and the heavy explosions of the bombs was undoubtedly somewhat nerve-racking, and going on as this did from 9 p.m. until 5.30 a.m. night after night you will understand it was definitely trying.

Nazis Stage Furious Night Raid On Metropolitan Area

Hospitals, Convents and Churches Among Numerous Buildings Hit

London, Nov. 17.

HUNDREDS of German bombers—sometimes roaring overhead at the rate of one a minute, sometimes in formations of 80 or more—last night and early today loosed one of the most frightful aerial attacks of the war on London.

For nearly two hours prior to midnight "screaming" bombs whistled earthwards, bursting throughout the metropolitan area.

"Baskets," consisting of mixed incendiary and high explosive bombs burst overhead. Time bombs dived into buildings, bug into roads and streets, and burst with tremendous force.

Hotels, hospitals, stores, convents, theatres and houses were wrecked or set afire. The death toll was feared to be great. There were many casualties.

Hitler was believed to be seeking revenge for recent withering R.A.F. attacks on Berlin and Hamburg.

The crash of bombs and thunder of anti-aircraft guns finally ceased in the early morning hours, but the all clear signal was not sounded until after a lull of several hours.

German raiders also were active in other parts of England.

Two Pombers Downed

A Nazi bomber crashed in flames near Woodnesborough, Kent. Another large bomber was shot down by heavy anti-aircraft fire on the south-east coast.

A high explosive bomb blasted a bus to pieces in the London area and four occupants were killed.

Last night's raid was one of the earliest of the war and when beleaguered Britishers finally emerged from their air raid shelters after the all clear signal sounded early this morning, they saw scenes of frightful devastation.

Churches, Convents Hit

Buildings hit in the London metropolitan area included seven hospitals, three hotels, two convents, two cinemas, some apartment houses, a furniture depository, a school and two rest centres.

A Catholic church was wrecked and two Methodist Churches were damaged.

Four working class houses were completely destroyed.

Rescue workers, ignoring the whistling bombs raining all around them, dug into the debris of demolished structures looking for victims.

Four Other Raiders Hit

Searchlights criss-crossed the night sky, spotting raiders as anti-aircraft guns kept up a thunderous cannonade.

Watchers saw one German raider twisting and turning to escape destruction as anti-aircraft shells burst in clusters around him.

The night raid began at 6 p.m. just after the Air Ministry announced that four German bombers had been shot down in various daylight raids over the British Isles.—United Press.

Raid Damage Said Slight

London, Nov. 17.

Raids on Britain on Saturday night, which again were mainly concentrated on London and Home Counties, were much lighter than on the previous night, according to an Air Ministry communique.

Dwellings suffered severely in some places but damage as a whole was not extensive. Some people were killed and others injured. Incendiary bombs were dropped on a town in the Midlands but fires were quickly dealt with and no casualties were recorded.

One enemy bomber was shot down in flames on Saturday night. Five were destroyed on Friday night.—Reuter.

Havoc Again Spread Among Nazi Areas

Aerodromes Attacked, Big Munitions Train Bombed

London, Nov. 17.

While Britain was enjoying a comparatively peaceful day, the R.A.F. again spread its wings over a wide area in Germany and German-occupied territories early yesterday, causing tremendous havoc among German military objectives.

German aerodromes at Stavanger, Doullus, Cambrai, St. Malo and Rennes were raided by Coastal Command aircraft together with the Fleet Air Arm, says an Air Ministry bulletin.

At Stavanger, large fires were started, probably among aircraft, and explosions were observed among the flames. Buildings on French aerodromes were hit, and hangars and landing-grounds damaged.

At Rennes, the arsenal was left blazing.

According to an Air Ministry communique, the gasworks at Brandenburg were subjected to a 50-minute attack, during which sticks of high-explosive bombs repeatedly fell across the target.

Hamburg Battered

Hamburg's powerful ground defences were in constant action throughout the night, and a heavy barrage of fire from light and heavy calibre guns greeted each sortie, but could not prevent the raiders from pressing home their attacks.

Fighter opposition was also encountered, and a Messerschmitt 109, which sought to intercept one of the British heavy bombers seven miles to the east of Bremerhaven, was shot down.

An Air Ministry communique announcing the attack on Hamburg says many tons of bombs were dropped in the course of long and extensive operations against many objectives, which included several railway yards, important oil refineries, the Altona electricity works and industrial targets.

Shipyards Attacked

One force of aircraft concentrated on the great Blomm and Voss shipyards. Docks at Antwerp also were bombed. Coastal command aircraft made a series of attacks on aerodromes in occupied territory, causing fires and explosions. Dunkirk also was attacked.

In daylight yesterday raids were carried out on oil refinery plant at Cologne, Bremen and Dortmund and the Ems Canal. Three planes did not return from the operations.

Preliminary reports show nine enemy aircraft were shot down in engagements over Britain this morning. One British fighter was lost but the pilot is safe.—Reuter.

Gale Battled

London, Nov. 17.

Flying in the teeth of a gale prevailing over the Straits of Dover, R.A.F. bombers launched a violent attack on the so-called invasion ports, and long range gun positions on the French coast soon after nightfall Friday, reports here said yesterday.

Vivid flashes like lighting lit the sky along many miles of the French coastline, and heavy explosions were heard on the British side of the Channel. Anti-aircraft shells burst in clusters, and searchlights, in a ring about Cap Gris Nez, played on low clouds whence the bombers swooped down on their targets.—United Press.

Munitions Train Hit

Vichy Nov. 17.

British bombers scored a direct hit on a German munitions train at Graville, causing an explosion which destroyed 500 houses and caused numerous casualties, the morning newspaper, "Action Française," reported here yesterday.

British bombers which have caused much damage in and about Le Havre by their incessant pounding of the so-called invasion port, again appeared over Le Havre on Friday night, the newspapers said.

The Kleber barracks have been badly hit, and oil refineries at Fort Gerome, as well as oil tanks there, have been wiped out, the newspaper declared.

Statistics show that the Seine Departments of France have suffered the heaviest war losses of all France.—United Press.

Reported Dead

Lord Baden Powell, founder of the Boy Scout movement, was reported by Havas yesterday to have died at Nairobi following recurring heart attacks. An appreciation of Lord Baden Powell, who was aged 83, will be found on the editorial page of this edition.

Coventry Cheerful After Savage Raid

Indomitable Spirit Shown During Visit of the King To Devastated Areas

London, Nov. 17.

Although badly battered by the savage German air raid on Thursday—said to be the fiercest attack yet launched on a British town—the people of Coventry are not in the least daunted and are cheerfully toiling to bring order out of chaos.

The tramp of feet and songs of workers clearing away rubble rise constantly from the streets of Coventry, and in the words of the mayor of the city: "The spirit of the workmen has not been shaken in the very least by what has happened."

The best evidence that the Mayor's words are true was provided by the occasional bursts of laughter rising above grimmer noises, proving yet again that that people's spirit is indomitable.

King Sees Devastation

The King yesterday spent more than five hours touring the city, viewing the damage, interviewing scores of injured and rescue workers, and seeing for himself what was being done for the many hundreds who have lost their homes.

Where damage was the worst, the King watched soldiers clearing roads and working with A.R.P. personnel on the remains of many buildings.

At the conclusion of the tour, His Majesty told Mr Herbert Morrison, Minister of Home Security: "I am glad that things have gone as well as they have in these dreadful circumstances."

Loyal Welcome

Everywhere the King walked through damaged streets he was greeted by cheering crowds, and cries of "God bless you" and "Thank you for coming" were frequently heard.

His Majesty often commented to the mayor on the wonderful spirit of the people.

Greatly cheered by the King's visit, work for the relief of distress was being carried on with redoubled energy under the leadership of Lord Dudley, Regional Commissioner, and Mr. Morrison.

Loud-speakers on vans patrolled already-cleared streets today telling the homeless to go to dispersal points, where buses were waiting to take them to rest centres. All those within a radius of many miles have been ordered promptly by Miss Florence Horsbrugh, Parliamentary Secretary to the Ministry of Health, to adopt certain hygienic measures.

Thousands of workers were being fed by field kitchens run by the authorities, and there was no shortage of food in rest centres. The ordinary mechanism of the Food Ministry was working well.

Lord Stanmore Injured

Lord Stanmore, Chief Liberal Whip in the House of Lords, was among those injured in Friday night's fierce German raid on London.

He was taken to a hospital after the house in which he was staying had been partially demolished.

Lord Stanmore is 69 years of age.—Reuter.

Hitler Reported to Have Planned Reprisals Against Dies Committee

Five-Hundred Page White Paper Revealing Un-American Activities by Nazis Compiled

Washington, Nov. 17.

Chancellor Hitler has planned definite reprisals against the investigations by Mr. Martin Dies, Chairman of the Congressional Committee Investigating Un-American Activities, it was reported here yesterday.

Mr. Dies was said to be in possession of a 500 page White Paper showing purported Fifth Column activities of German consuls and agents, which probably will be issued shortly after the approval of other committee members has been obtained.

Other reports dealing with Italian agents will be issued later, it was said.—United Press.

Diplomatic Rupture Seen

Washington, Nov. 17.

The United States is moving slowly but surely towards the severance of diplomatic relations with Germany, according to well qualified observers here.

The free hand given by Mr. Cordell Hull, Secretary of State, to the Committee Investigating Un-American activities is regarded significant, since hitherto the official tendency has been to restrain investigations lest disclosures result in a public outcry for the severance of diplomatic relations.

Some officials here are reported as saying privately that United States representatives in German territory recently encountered endless difficulties in their endeavours to collect information, and they argue that there is, therefore, no reason for allowing Germans full freedom to obtain information in the United States.

Probe Completed

In the meantime, the committee on un-American activities has prepared an investigation into German consulates and German news agencies.

A member of the Dies Committee, Congressman Jerry Voorhis, of California, says that the group should continue its investigation of subversive elements, but should leave the problem of combatting sabotage and espionage to the Department of Justice.

The Committee was expected to begin tomorrow an investigation into the activities of German and Italian diplomatic officials in the United States, and members of the German and Italian diplomatic corps have been invited by the Chairman, Mr. Martin Dies, to attend.—Reuter.

Arab Tribesmen Support Britain

Correspondent Finds Keen Interest in War in Aden Protectorate Region

Aden, Nov. 17.

Arab tribesmen in remote parts of Aden protectorate are following British war effort with the liveliest interest, writes Reuter's Special correspondent who has just returned from a three-days' visit by car and camel to the protectorate, north-western frontier. In every village in which they stopped, the officer with whom he was travelling was closely questioned by large crowds which immediately gathered to welcome him. When he gave them the news of the latest British successes the tribesmen unmistakeably showed their pleasure.

In the wild mountain region dividing the protectorate from Yemen, only three years ago travellers were constantly held up and robbed and tribal feuds were in full swing. Today security and freedom are guaranteed by the Government and tribesmen have been successfully encouraged to take to the cultivation of the land.

One typical sheik, who until recently was living on loot, is now leading a law-abiding life and only two weeks ago contributed £17 to the Governor's Hurricane fund. From all parts of the region young men are travelling to Aden to seek enlistment in the local native military units.

Dislike of Italians appears to be particularly strong among these fierce democrats, some of whom have visited Eritrea. They were interested to meet the first journalist to visit their region and one powerful sheik asked to send a message to England telling the British that the Arabs were solidly behind them, adding, "May God give them a speedy victory."—Reuter.

★Captains Claim Ships Chased

taro interfered, signalling the pursuing craft. The warships altered their course and both the Idarwald and the Rhein gained the river mouth and the harbour, Captain Ulfert said.

Crew Takes to Boats

Herr Eduardi Trauffel, German Consul at Tampico, said Captain J. Shurt, of the scuttled ship Phrygia, told him that the Idarwald and Rhein turned and ran to port after searchlight beams of the warships were focused on them.

The Phrygia was so close to the warship that it could not escape, so Captain Shurt ordered it set afire and scuttled. All 40 members of the Phrygia's crew escaped in life boats, the Consul said.

The exact extent of the Orinoco's participation was not clear from immediate reports but it is believed she was not actually pursued.

Sr. Gerardo Ostos, in the office of the Port Captain, said the Orinoco suffered engine trouble in her outward dash and had turned about and was heading for the river before her sister ships became involved with the warships.

Sr. Ostos said the Port Office on Friday received reports, which could not be confirmed at the time, that "several British destroyers were sighted off the coast."

Vessel Burned Out

Early on Saturday watchers on shore saw searchlight beams on the horizon, then a fire which mounted rapidly, revealing the Phrygia in flames.

By 9.30 a.m. the Phrygia had burned nearly to the water's edge, said reports. The flaming vessel was reported to be three miles south of the river mouth.

There were no reports, however, of any gunfire or explosions having been heard.

Two Mexican gunboats descended the river at the time of the German vessels' departure. The gunboats were said to have been ordered to accompany the vessels to the limit of Mexican waters.

When the boats left they had little cargo and their lifeboats were ready for quick lowering. Their destination officially was said to have been "some ports in Spain."—United Press.

Belgium and Holland Hit by Hurricane

Storm Strikes Lowlands After Damaging France

Brussels, Nov. 16.

The hurricane which caused terrific damage in Northern France on Thursday evening wreaked havoc also in Belgium and Holland on the same night.

Throughout Belgium, roofs of houses were blown away, trees and telegraph poles uprooted, lamp-posts and kiosks sent crashing to the ground. Traffic and telephone communications were disrupted in several parts of the country.

The hurricane, by blowing away railway signal posts, was the cause of a serious railway accident in which 21 people were killed and 80 wounded.

Brussels and Antwerp bore the brunt of the tempest, terrible damage being caused in both cities.

In Holland, several persons were killed during the storm.—Havas.

Hitler Said to Have Lost in Balkans

Southern Axis Bearings Seen Burning Out

New York, Nov. 17.

Herr Hitler probably lost a major battle last week without firing a shot, says the "New York Daily News" military correspondent. "Half of his projected Balkan campaign collapsed about his ears, doing what may be irreparable harm to the grand strategy of the German General Staff," the paper says.

"The plan was almost completely wrecked by a combination of the Rumanian earthquake, British bombers and Greek sharpshooters. In fact the Axis did not do so well anywhere last week. It seemed as if the southern end was about to burn out its bearings."—Reuter.

Boulogne Damaged By Earthquake

A short earthquake preceded by a violent gale caused damage at Boulogne estimated at several million francs on Saturday night, according to a Boulogne message to the German news agency. Many families are homeless.—Reuter.

★London Made More Determined

Of course, the raids were not confined to London but were also made both in the east and west and in the north and south as well as the Midlands.

Defences Change Matters

So far as London is concerned, however, the whole aspect of matters changed with startling suddenness on Wednesday night. By that time the authorities had ringed London with guns of all calibres up to six-inch naval guns, and these put up a terrific barrage which the Germans found it exceedingly hard to penetrate. Shells were apparently bursting all night, and they could not get through. The sound of all this firing round the outer fringes of London was simply terrific, and as the firing broke out afresh every time the drone of a German plane was heard in the vicinity and all this went on till 6 a.m., you will appreciate there was not much sleep for any of us. It was, however, very reassuring indeed, as it meant that we were fighting back and had found at least a partial answer to these murderous night raids. Similar conditions obtained on Thursday night and have continued since nightly.

All this week we have had day raids on the City as well, and it may interest you to know that a great part of this letter has been dictated down in the air raid shelter in the cellars. You will, of course, have heard of the fires in Aldersgate and Cheapside and also in the northern approach, to say nothing of the apparently deliberate attacks on Buckingham Palace and a delayed action bomb weighing over a ton, which fell in St. Paul's Churchyard and has, now, happily, been safely removed. The soldiers who did this work, and especially their Officer, in our opinion deserve the Victoria Cross. All this has led to the temporary closing of many of the main arteries to London as well as upset all local train services. This has in turn led to considerable difficulty in getting in and out of the City. All the ordinary routes are upset, and the staff have simply to get in and out home again as best they can, some of them taking several hours on the journey each way.

Services Interfered With

The other attacks of a similar nature made throughout the length and breadth of the country have also seriously interfered not only with railway traffic but also with postal and telegraphic services. In some cases telegrams take two days to reach their destination, while to get a letter within two days of its posting is the exception rather than the rule.

We have done our best to give you a short picture of the conditions as they are, and have not attempted in any way to minimize what has happened and is still happening. On the other hand, we can thoroughly reassure you that there is not the very slightest despondency or panic anywhere. Everyone is, if anything, more sure than ever of final victory. We will have to pass through bad times, probably worse even than we have so far experienced, and the risk of an attempted invasion by air and sea is as real and imminent as ever, but we are certain now that any such attempts are doomed to failure and that it is only a matter of time before the tide turns and we become the attackers and not the defenders.

P.S. We have just learned by telephone that Mr. Barry's house suffered severely in last night's raid. One bomb fell in his garden at the back of the house, another in the road in front of the house and a third demolished a house almost immediately opposite. We have not yet got details, but we understand Mr. Barry's own house is uninhabitable and he is now looking for other accommodation, but we are very glad indeed to say neither he, his wife nor family are in any way injured.

Spain Lifts Ban on U.S. Press Service

Incident Described as Totally Terminated

Madrid, Nov. 17.

Spanish authorities here yesterday announced that they had lifted a ban on transmission of news by American press services and correspondents.

The announcement followed conferences between Government officials and Mr. Alexander W. Weddell, the United States Ambassador to Spain.

When announcing that the ban, imposed Thursday to become effective Monday had been lifted, authorities said the "incident totally has been terminated."

The ban was imposed after Spanish authorities asserted the U.S. State Department had prohibited entry of the Spanish news agency "Efe" into the United States. Washington officials denied "Efe" had been denied entry and ordered Mr. Weddell to investigate the ban.—United Press.

Eden to Make Statement

London, Nov. 17.

A statement by the Secretary of State for War, Mr. Anthony Eden, on his visit to the Middle East, is expected to be made in Parliament soon and a debate is likely to take place in private. Debates are also likely to take place shortly on the war efforts of India, Burma and the colonies.—Reuter.

New Cabinet in Egypt

Cairo, Nov. 17.

Following the sudden death of the Egyptian Premier, Hassan Sabry Pasha, on Thursday, Hussen Sirry Pasha, former Minister of Public Works, has been asked to form a new Cabinet.—Reuter.

Lorraine Exiles Reach New Homes

German Expulsion Order Believed Likely to Aid Free French Movement

Vichy, Nov. 17.

Five trainloads of French-speaking persons expelled by the Germans from Lorraine are passing through Lyons daily.

A semi-official French report says that Monsignor Heintz, Bishop of Metz, meets each train and goes from carriage to carriage speaking words of comfort and hope.

The moral of the refugees is stated to be very high, and their faith in the future absolute.

About 900 refugees arrived at Montauban on Saturday, and 1,200 at Auch.

As a result of the German action in Lorraine, Swiss opinion is that the influence of the Free French movement in France will strengthen and opposition to the Petain Government increase.

According to the Vichy correspondent of "La Suisse," not only have the inhabitants of the Moselle Department—retaken from Germany in 1918—been expelled, but also those of Meurthe and Moselle Department, which has always belonged to France.—Reuter.

in Albania, dividing them into two armies under the command of General Vercellino and General Celoso.

This reorganization is held to confirm the view that Italy was completely surprised by the strength of the Greek resistance. Although there are from 200,000 to 250,000 Italian troops in Albania, it is believed that they are unlikely to begin a major campaign in Greece unless they are able to keep communications with Italy open.

Further Victories

Still further Greek successes, including additional captures of Italian troops and material, are reported in an official communique issued last night, which states that on the whole of the front, and especially in Epirus, from the mountainous region immediately to the east of Koritza, important fighting took place throughout Saturday.

Many prisoners, trench mortars and all kinds of material were taken.

The communique adds that when retreating from Onntea, the enemy burned half the town.

During the day, Italian aircraft bombed some towns and villages of no military importance, the communique asserts, and there were no casualties.—Reuter.

Encirclement Continued

Monastir, Yugoslavia, Nov. 17.

Greek troops advanced from positions around Mount Ivan in a southwest direction to Zvzasa, about twelve kilometres to the northwest of Koritza, frontier reports said here yesterday.

This movement combined with the Greek drive on the main road toward Koritza threatens the encirclement of the city from two directions, the reports declared.

Greek sources said yesterday that the Greek Army captured several hundred Italians, several hundred machine guns, and five hundred mules, which the Italians abandoned in their retreat.—United Press.

Yugoslav Reports

Ohrid, Yugoslavia, Nov. 17.

Greek troops operating west of Mount Smolika attacked Italian troops near the Greek village of Konica on the road to Mesaria and forced Italian troops to retreat over the Albanian frontier, reports received here yesterday said.

The Greeks pursued the Italians and occupied several mountain heights inside Albania, south-east of Leskovik, the reports stated.

Other reports received at the frontier declared that three Greek and British planes bombed Valona and the fortress between the town proper and the sea port.

Koritza Said Evacuated

Greek positions around Cangon and the neighbouring heights of the Morova mountains are reported to be strongly held, and further advances would constitute a spectacular threat to Koritza, it was said.

Owing to the continuous bombardment of Koritza the civilian population now is completely evacuated, frontier reports stated.

General Ubaldo Soddu, Italian Under-Secretary of War, and new commander of Italy's Army against Greece, is said to be withdrawing troops from Koritza in a southern direction along the main road to Leskovik, and concentrating forces near the villages of Bobostica and Dvoran, about ten kilometres south of Koritza.

The manœuvre may be a preliminary to an attack aimed at Kastoria to relieve the pressure on Koritza by threatening the Greek rear, frontier reports said.—United Press.

Counter-attack Repulsed

Budapest, Nov. 17.

Greek forces in the central sector repulsed an Italian counter-attack in which the Italians employed new levies of troops, radio reports received here from Athens stated last night.

The Greeks drove back the Italians in the Kalamas coastal sector, where the Italians had to make a great effort to prevent themselves from being cut off by Greek units, it was reported.

In the Mount Pindus sector Greek troops reoccupied many burned villages, while Greek cavalry continued to pursue the retreating Italians.

Greek and British aviation bombed communications and roads both at Kalamas, and in the north, paralyzing Italian communications and damaging supply depots, the Greek radio reported.

The Italians have not been given time to reorganize because of the operations of Greek and British planes, which also have virtually stopped use of the Straits of Otranto as a supply line, the raid added.—United Press.

Mussolini to Break Silence Today

Rome, Nov. 17.

Premier Mussolini is expected to break his silence for the first time since the Greek-Italian war began by speaking on Monday to deny British claims of damages done to the harbour of Taranto, it was announced here yesterday. The speech may be made in the harbour of Taranto itself, it was said.—United Press.

Wild Italian Claims Denied in London

No Battleship Torpedoed As Alleged by Rome

London, Nov. 17.

There is no truth in the Italian claim to have torpedoed a British battleship of the Ramillies class. It is clear the claim was made in an attempt to divert attention from Italian losses.

The claim, which was repeated yesterday, was first made on November 12. It was during the night of November 11-12 that three of six Italian battleships were crippled by the Fleet Air Arm at Taranto.

It seems to be an established practice of the enemy to try to offset any alteration disadvantageous to themselves in the relative strengths of the British and Axis navies by making false claims to have inflicted losses upon the Royal Navy. At the end of the first week of the Norwegian campaign, during which the German navy had suffered very heavy losses, the German Wireless made a fantastic claim that during this one week the following units of the British Navy had been sunk or damaged—four battleships, two battle-cruisers, one aircraft-carrier, five cruisers, nine destroyers and seven submarines.

Similarly the announcement of the transfer to Great Britain of 50 destroyers from the United States navy was immediately followed by German claims to have sunk or seriously damaged six British destroyers. None of these claims had any foundation.

H.M.S. Ivanhoe and H.M.S. Esk, the loss of which was announced on September 5, were actually sunk on September 1, the delay in making the announcement being due to informing the next of kin of the casualties before making public the announcement of losses. The sinking of the two British destroyers had moreover been claimed by Germany on September 2.—British Official Wireless.

That fascinating, fictional rogue, the Lone Wolf, whose light-fingered, light-hearted adventures have thrilled moviegoers, appeared yesterday in the Metropol Theatre in "The Lone Wolf Strikes." Once more Mr. Warren William portrayed the international scapegrace who mixes robbery and romance indiscriminately and this time pretty Miss Joan Perry is the cause of Michael Lanyard returning to the ways of crime. The new adventures of the Lone Wolf are hailed not alone because the film marks the renewal of what amounts to a screen tradition, but also because of the excellent cast and thrilling entertainment value of the film itself. The picture opens with the Lone Wolf in retirement, happy with his seclusion and his goldfish, much to the disgust of Mr. Eric Blore, his hilarious valet. A close friend of the Lone Wolf's is murdered and a fabulous necklace is stolen, so the ex-rogue returns to the underworld wars. His task of administering justice is complicated by pretty Miss Perry, the slain man's daughter, who arrogantly attempts to instruct the Lone Wolf in the art of crime detection. To top it off, the young heiress gets herself kidnapped by a rival gang of thieves who also are after the necklace. With typical Lone Wolf audacity and urbanity, Mr. William frustrates the criminals, rescues the heiress, retrieves the necklace and generally manages to wind up with all the cards. Including, of course, Miss Perry, who supplies the romantic note without which no Lone Wolf adventure would be complete. Other headline players include Miss Astrid Allwyn and Messrs. Alan Baxter, Robert Wilcox and Montagu Love.—W.A.G.

Threatened at every turn, his life constantly in danger, Charlie Chan is once more with us, in "Charlie Chan at the Wax Museum" now showing at the Grand. The imperturbable Chinese detective is as suave, and indeed as smug, as ever, coming out with such remarks as "I am never surprised; I make use of surprise, but I am never surprised." It is a rather intricate story, and one is never quite sure of the names of the various characters, but thrills are there in plenty. The setting of the plot, a museum where models and groups of famous murderers are on exhibition, is eerie enough, and the atmosphere is successfully built up into one of horror and suspense. The identity of the actual killer in the story is kept hidden to the bitter end, the denouement providing some excitement. An aspect of the "Charlie Chan" series which has been modified in this film is the part of Chan's son, although he still chips in frequently with "Gee, Pop!" "Aw, Pop!" and "Say, Pop" in a most irritating way, the action of the film being halted while a little humour is forced out of this character. Taken as a whole the film is excellent for its type, doing all that it sets out to do, and providing good light entertainment.—J. S.-B.

Rumanian Quake Toll Now 411

Bucharest, Nov. 17.

The nationwide toll of Rumania's earthquakes today had reached 411, but it was estimated that from 90 to 100 bodies were still under the ruins of the Carlton Hotel in Bucharest.

A fire which had been raging in an apartment house for more than a week was nearly out, but fumes were keeping occupants away.

The mother of King Michael, returning today from an extended visit of regions devastated by the earthquakes, found many cables of condolence, including expressions of regret from Kings Victor Emmanuel III of Italy, Gustav V of Sweden and Christian X of Denmark and from the Presidents of Chile and the United States.

President Roosevelt's message expressed both his own and the American people's sympathies.—United Press.

British Losses of War Material Negligible

New York, Nov. 17.

Loss of war material through sinkings and bombings were negligible, declared Mr. Purvis, head of the British Purchasing Commission in the United States, to reporters last evening just before his departure for England. Nevertheless, he added, Britain needed more and vital weapons of all kinds, including ships. Mr. Purvis is en route to London to report to the British Government on British war purchasing in the United States.—Reuter.

An Aid To Success.

The first essential of success in any walk of life is surely perfect health of both body and brain. Vigorous health, which gives that abounding energy and driving force, is dependent upon a plentiful supply of rich, red blood to nourish the nerves, feed the brain and to revitalize the innermost cells of all the organs and tissues of the body.

Look to the condition of your blood, therefore, and, if it is impoverished and scanty, begin a course of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills renowned for more than fifty years as a blood builder and nerve tonic of the highest order. They are unsurpassed as a remedy for anaemia, indigestion, nerve weakness, insomnia, pains in the back and limbs, loss of appetite, depression, premature ageing and the health disorders to which women are subject. Chemists everywhere can supply

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

Nine Nazi Planes Brought Down

London, Nov. 17.

British anti-aircraft guns and fighting planes combined this morning to shoot down at least nine German raiders which were part of a large number of Nazi planes en route to London which were repulsed over the Kent coast.

Four Germans who baled out of damaged planes were captured.—United Press.

European Diplomats Remain Active

Turkish Envoy Returns to Ankara from Berlin

Istanbul, Nov. 17.

Husrev Gerede, Turkish Ambassador to Germany, arrived here last night en route to Ankara, where he will spend several days in conversations with leading Turkish statesmen.

Gerede said he returned at the Turkish Government's request, and left Berlin on the day of the arrival of M. Molotov, Soviet Foreign Commissar.

At Sofia, the Ambassador had an hour's talk with the Turkish Minister to Bulgaria.—Reuter.

Antonescu Leaves Rome

Rome, Nov. 17.

The Rumanian Prime Minister and virtual Dictator, General Antonescu, who in his three-days' stay here had talks with both Signor Mussolini and Count Ciano, Italian Foreign Minister, left here last night, presumably for Berlin.

Il Duce, Count Ciano and other Italian dignitaries, and the German Chargé d'Affaires, Prince Bismarck, were at the station to see him off.—Reuter.

Laval Talks with Suner

Vichy, Nov. 17.

M. Pierre Laval, Vice-Premier and Foreign Minister, had a long talk yesterday with Senor Serrano Suner when the Spanish Foreign Minister passed through Paris on his way to Berlin, states the Spanish Embassy.

Senor Suner has been invited by the German Foreign Minister, Herr Joachim von Ribbentrop, for a new series of talks.—Reuter.

R.A.F. Raids Declared Having Results

New York, Nov. 17.

Hardships caused by British air raids and prospects of a long war with diminishing chances of victory already were producing "significant results" in Germany, according to Otto Tolischus in an article in "Time Magazine." The results, he says, manifest themselves not only in increased grumbling, but also in a kind of passive resistance through "loitering and lingering," which is cutting down production. The writer says even the Nazis find it difficult to cope with this new type of opposition.—Reuter.

Jervis Bay Captain Awarded V.C.

King Approves Posthumous Honouring of Acting Capt. Fegan for Valour at Sea

London, Nov. 17.

One of the most courageous acts of the entire war has been recognised by the King, who has approved the award of the Victoria Cross posthumously to Acting Captain E.S.F. Fegan, of the armed British merchant cruiser Jervis Bay, for valour in challenging hopeless odds and giving his life to save the many ships it it was his duty to protect.

Capt. Fegan was well-known along the China coast, as before the war he was commander of the British cruiser Suffolk, of the China Station.

On sighting a powerful German warship on November 5 while escorting a convoy of 38 merchant ships, Captain Fegan at once drew out from the convoy and made straight for the enemy. He brought his ship between the raider and the convoy, and, although hopelessly out-gunned engaged the raider for an hour before going down with colours still flying.

As a result of this courageous act, at least 33 of the 38 ships were saved.—Reuter.

£10,000 Again Contributed To Voluntary War Fund

Remittance Will be Sent Home for Third Month in Succession

ONCE again over £10,000 have been collected in one month for the Voluntary War Contribution Fund from Britons all over China, who have done their utmost to help in the war at home. The sum of £10,000 will be remitted to England for the third month in succession, and there will be about £400 over, which will make a handsome start for the coming month. The original remittance was of £52,000 sent home on August 15, and since then £10,000 have been contributed every month, and sent home. The remittances are earmarked for the purchase of aeroplanes.

The exact total collected up to November 15 was £10,405. 7. 0, of which £455. 4.4. had been held over from the previous month.

It is hoped to collect a similar sum in the period from November 15 to December 15, and it is emphasized that to attain this Britons must give as much as possible, every dollar counting. Contributions should be sent to the Hongkong & Shanghai Bank or to the Chartered Bank for account of the Voluntary War Contribution Fund.

Opposition to Phone Rates Increase

Chinese Press Condemns Proposals

Chinese public bodies in Shanghai will soon voice their opposition publicly against the increase of rates by the Shanghai Telephone Company, states the Chinese press which also expresses the hope that the Municipal Council in the French Concession will not agree to the proposed increase.

Since the publication of the three principles governing the increase of the telephone rates, there have been many unfavourable comments and criticisms made in the Chinese press, stating that the rate-increase proposal is unreasonable. In addition to the increase of the monthly charge by 30 per cent. the number of calls allowed has also been reduced while an extra call will cost seven instead of three cents.

An inspired news article appearing in the "Sin Wan Pao" states that all telephone users are much surprised and indignant over the proposed increase of rates because they think that such an increase is not necessary since the company has been doing good business. It is said to be a "record-breaking" price increase in the public utility field.

Chinese Hawker Murdered

Jealousy was the reason attributed for the murder yesterday morning of a Chinese hawker who was struck seven times on the head with an axe wielded by a Chinese who was arrested by detectives of the Municipal police shortly after the crime which took place at the intersection of Elgin and Cunningham Road.

Washington Here In Shanghai

Sails on Wednesday with Five Hundred American Evacuees

It is understood that a large number of American women associated in missionary work in China will be leaving in the ss. Washington, third American evacuation ship to call at Shanghai, when she sails from here on Wednesday morning. The liner entered port yesterday afternoon at 2.30, tying up in midstream. She was originally scheduled to arrive on November 19, leaving on November 21, but under the new arrangement will sail on Wednesday, a day sooner than expected.

Under five hundred Americans will embark from Shanghai, many, who had originally planned to go, cancelling their bookings, apparently intending to sail at a later date, if at all. Cancellations have been coming in regularly to the local American President Lines offices, and it is believed that the special arrangements for extra accommodation, such as the installation of cots in the public rooms, will not be required.

About 100 first class passengers will board the liner from Shanghai, 240 tourist class and 150 special European class passengers also going on board. Although the liner will not be filled to capacity when she leaves Shanghai, it is understood that a great many Americans are waiting in Manila for transportation to America, and these will sail on the vessel.

Women associated with the American Christian Missions throughout China have decided to leave the Orient within the next two months, many leaving in the ss. Washington on Wednesday. As the missionaries are naturally reluctant to leave their work in China, the evacuation order placed them in a difficulty, since it is believed that if all the missionaries were withdrawn, much of the evangelical work accomplished in the past would be wasted. Many, however, have decided that they must respond to the request of the American government for evacuation, and are consequently leaving.

Famed Gatecrasher Visits Shanghai

Will Invade Private Sanctums Today

When the Customs tender brought the visitors from the ss. Washington, third American evacuation liner, to Shanghai yesterday, "Pinky" Ginsberg, a waiter on board, came ashore with the rest to do the sights and to give Shanghai the once over.

"Gatecrashing" Pinky explained after invading the editorial sanctum of the "North-China Daily News" is common parlance, getting into some place for nothing.

"Pinky" was the picture of dejection having the extreme misfortune of landing in Shanghai on a Sunday when he cannot follow his ardent pursuit of "gatecrashing." Asked if he intended to go about his business today he replied with a smile that he expected to see all the consuls and numerous officials today. Yesterday, he explained, would be devoted to seeing the town. In the evening, he said, he intended to visit the night spots for which Shanghai is famous.

The visitor, a native of Hokoken, New Jersey, and owner of a pleasing personality has been vying with "One Eyed" Connelly for honours as the world's champion gatecrasher. He has been "gatecrashing" since he was in his teens and started on his career by getting into a schoolboy football game by building a trash fire near the gate and then shouting "Fire". He rushed in when the attention of the gatekeeper was distracted.

"Pinky" produced a number of credentials from officials in Honolulu and other places attesting to his abilities as a "gatecrasher."

Robber Fires Shot

An armed robber escaping with four unarmed accomplices from a Chinese shop at 456 Kiukiang Road early yesterday morning after an unsuccessful attempt to steal a quantity of cloth fired a shot at several Chinese who pursued him.

The alarm was raised by an occupant of the house and the robbers immediately took to flight with an occupant of the house and others in pursuit. All the robbers escaped. Detectives of Louza police station conducted enquiries at the scene of the crime, but no arrests were made.

Hongkew Tension Continues, Though Restrictions Fewer

Searches of Pedestrians Less Severe; Chapoo Road Bridge Opened; Traffic Still Delayed

THE tension which prevailed in Hongkew on Saturday following the shooting of a Japanese sergeant-major continued yesterday, passage into Hongkew being restricted only through the Garden Bridge and Chapoo Road Bridge, in the latter vehicular traffic was not permitted, while barbed-wire barricades and sentries rendered North Szechuen Road Bridge inaccessible to traffic and pedestrians. Egress from Hongkew through this bridge was permitted in the afternoon. It was learned that a number of prominent Chinese officials and adherents to the Chungking Government have been preparing to evacuate the French Concession following the taking over of the Second Special District Court by officials of the Nanking regime.

Conditions north of the Creek were not alleviated to any appreciable extent yesterday except for the abandonment by the Japanese authorities of the searching of pedestrians which was in rigorous force on Saturday. Japanese blue-jackets, however, did not relax their surveillance over Hongkew and patrols were scattered at various sections throughout the entire area.

Traffic Disrupted

A check-up yesterday disclosed that the abnormal conditions prevailing on Saturday were far more serious than at first thought. Traffic and passage were suspended on the North Szechuen Road and Chapoo Road Bridges and bus services along the Hongkew Nos. 8 and 9 routes were disrupted. On the former the buses were maintained only up to Haining Road and on the latter, the buses only ran up to a point near Range Road. Bus passengers and pedestrians in Hongkew and other areas north of the Creek were put to far greater inconvenience than people negotiating the bridges from the Settlement side. Unaware of the restrictions imposed, many bus passengers from Hongkew, after alighting proceeded along North Szechuen Road or Chapoo Road where they had to line up in a long queue from Saturday afternoon up to about 10 p.m. when some Japanese and foreigners were allowed to get through.

Persons who were unfortunate enough to get near the queue were not allowed to leave and had to wait long hours in the cold before being allowed to proceed. Many Japanese, including a number of children, were also incommoded in the same manner. One of the unfortunates pointed out to a reporter of the "North-China Daily News" that the long hours he spent at what he termed the "barriers," were reminiscent of the barriers put up at the two extremities to the French and British Concessions in Tientsin two years ago when persons were known to have had to be lined up for as long as 36 hours before being allowed access to or egress from the foreign-occupied areas.

Japanese Also Inconvenienced

Chapoo Road was still cordoned off with stout ropes yesterday while Japanese blue-jackets with fixed bayonets stood by to see that no one should pass the prohibited area. As most of the Japanese residents north of the Creek reside in the North Szechuen Road and Dixwell Road areas, they were put to greater inconvenience than foreigners living in Wayside and Broadway or East Seward Road who could proceed by bus up to the Garden Bridge and then walk unhindered into the Settlement, after crossing the bridge.

Passage along North Soochow Road yesterday was restricted and the General Hospital found itself in a predicament, being isolated for a time from the Settlement. In the morning many patients could not gain access to the hospital. The restrictions on Boone Road yesterday were lifted, much to the relief of residents in the locality.

Motorists and vehicular traffic north of the Creek did not get off any easier than the pedestrians, having to wait a considerable time before being allowed to proceed.

Move from Concession

It was learned yesterday that many Chinese officials and adherents of the Chungking Government had left or were preparing to leave the French Concession following the taking over of the Chinese courts there by the authorities of the Nanking regime.

The four Chinese Government controlled banks were reported recently to have been looking for new quarters in the International Settlement. Only the difficulty of finding suitable buildings is preventing an immediate exodus of these institutions, not to mention the number of Chungking Government officials and others who sought sanctuary in regions in the French Concession remotest from the sphere of Japanese influence.

The Settlement Bund which long ago was regarded by these Chinese as untenable following the taking over of certain bank premises by the Japanese military authorities, the French Concession, especially the Avenue Joffre district, came to be looked upon as the safest locality. The taking over of the courts and other local political developments following in the wake of the world situation, recently left considerable doubts in the minds of Chinese banking and other officials regarding the security of their new locations.

Thai-Indo-China War Reports Denied

French Planes Said Flying Over Siamese Border

Bangkok, Nov. 17.

Officials today emphatically denied Japanese reports that Thailand forces had entered French Indo-China and that a war had broken out between the two countries. They said that the border situation remained unchanged.

Officials said that French planes "daily" have been violating the Thai frontier and that the French flew over the frontier yesterday and this morning. However, there has been no incident, officials said.

The tension between the two countries noticeably was increasing, but officials were silent as to their next move.—United Press.

Food Shortage on Held Steamer

Vessel Cables for Help After Long Detention by Japanese Off Chusan

All those aboard a Carlowitz & Company's steamer the Chinese name of which is the ss. Mow Fu, which was detained by the Japanese off the Chekiang coast early in the month, are suffering from shortage of food and exposure and have cabled to Shanghai for help, states the "Shun Pao." Representatives of the firm here are reported to have gone to their rescue aboard a Japanese steamer.

Agents of the company in Chusan have also been asked to offer a helping hand, while the German Consul-General in Shanghai is said to have been asked to make further representations to the Japanese, so that the ship may be released at an early date. Excepting mail, all other goods aboard the detained vessel are forbidden to be moved but food is running short, the report states.

Two other German-owned steamers are said to be also detained off Chusan by the Japanese. When the company here cabled them for information the cables were returned, the report alleges. Several other foreign-owned ships are said to be detained, but no details are given. The same paper reports that the American Consul-General here is still awaiting a reply from the Japanese to his protest against the detention of the ss. Tasang off the Chekiang coast a week ago.

It will be recalled in this connection that a few days ago, Chinese reports stated that all major as well as minor coastal districts in Chekiang were again closed to shipping. The Japanese Commissioner of the Customs in Shanghai was said to have refused to grant Customs papers to ships destined for those places.

The Development of the Mass

Radio Address Given by Rev. Wilcock, S.J. On Sunday in the Catholic Hour Series

A FEW years ago after the Bolshevists had begun their persecution of religion in Russia, and when most of the Catholic priests there were already in prison, the Holy Father arranged for two priests to be sent to Moscow to try to work there. Before they left he called them to the Vatican and gave them his blessing on their dangerous task, which quite probably would end in their being imprisoned and perhaps even martyred. During his paternal exhortation, the Pope told them that if they were put in prison, he gave them permission to cut down all of the unessential ceremonies and prayers of the Mass, so that it might be easier for them to arrange to have at least this great consolation while suffering in prison. "In fact" the Holy Father said, "I give you in advance all the dispensations which I can give you in this matter, should they be required, so that you may say Holy Mass in prison."

The two priests, after having consulted the theologians and liturgists in Rome, agree that if they were in prison and were able to obtain a piece of pure bread and a glass of wine from the grape, they could just make a short offertory of these mentally, say the words of consecration over them, and then receive them in communion.

First Holy Mass

The first Holy Mass, celebrated by Christ Himself on the eve of His Passion, was apparently a very short simple ceremony. After Our Lord's Resurrection the apostles continued to do exactly as He had done, just that short ceremony, adding to it a few suitable prayers of preparation and thanksgiving as each found best. The nucleus of this action was the action of Christ Himself at the Last Supper. The essential elements of it are, (1) the preparation of bread and wine, (2) the giving of thanks, and consecration, and (3) the breaking and distribution in Holy Communion.

Ceremonial Development

At the first Masses of the apostles only those who were baptized were allowed to be present. For those who were not yet baptized, the Catechumens, there were prayer-meetings at which they could be present together with the baptized. These meetings would take place in the mornings, according to the Jewish tradition, whereas the Great Sacrifice, the Lord's Supper was celebrated in the evening, and only those who were baptized participated. After some years and partly as a result of the persecutions, it was found more suitable to hold these two meetings one immediately after the other. After the psalms and readings and sermons, special prayers were said for the Catechumens, who were then sent out. When the doors were closed behind them, the offerings were brought to the altar and consecrated by the priest. Then all present received Holy Communion.

The Holy Sacrifice of the Mass, as we know it today, still contains these two distinct parts which are known as the Mass of the Catechumens and the Mass of the Faithful. In the Oriental Mass, shortly after the gospel, the deacon nowadays still turns to the congregation and orders the Catechumens to leave the church and the doors to be closed.

Languages Used

Since the language of the Mass and the ceremonies accompanying it were not fixed by Our Lord, in the early days of the church each apostle was at liberty to surround the central act with suitable prayers and ceremonies according to the circumstances and places. When the apostles were dispersed, working far away from each other in different countries, they continued to say Mass as they had done together in Jerusalem, but now the language used by each was different and also the customs and ceremonies of an unessential character with which they surrounded the Mass varied very much. The Mass remained the same all over the world, only the ceremonies and language differed. However, as time went on the form used in the centre of Christianity, in Rome, was gradually adopted by almost all the West; the form used in Byzantium was taken over by a large part of the East.

All these different rites have existed side by side in the Catholic Church, during the centuries, right up to today. The unfortunate schism of the 11th and 12th centuries, which separated most of the East from Catholic unity, left comparatively few representatives of these Eastern rites in the Church. Yet there has never been a time when Eastern rites were not in use in the Church, and we hope and pray that some day the separated members of Christianity using Eastern rites may re-unite with Church, and so once again the number of Catholics using Eastern rites may become almost as numerous as those using the Latin rite.

The Roman Mass

The Roman Mass is the one used now in almost all Catholic Churches. Documents show that already in the 6th century Mass was celebrated in Rome almost as it is today. Mass in the Roman rite today has three forms: Pontifical Mass, High Mass and Low Mass. Pontifical Mass is had when a prelate, such a bishop, celebrates solemnly assisted by a priest, a deacon, subdeacon and various servers. High Mass is sung by a priest, deacon and subdeacon. Low Mass is had when a priest alone celebrates in the simple shortened form. The Oriental rites usually have not this distinction, but then they have several etirely different texts of the Mass for different occasions.

The Different Rites

The closer one studies the different rites, the more one comes to see how similar they are, and how not merely the essential parts of the Mass, but also most of the other parts were obviously once identical in many cases. The sources of the different rites must have been the same. The East has been more conservative than the West in preserving the primitive prayers and ceremonies.

The Byzantine Mass has remained almost unchanged from the time of Saint John Chrysostom in the 5th century; the Roman Mass, especially in the form of Low Mass, has had a tendency to abbreviate the prayers.

Just as the ceremonies of the various Catholic rites which seem so different to each other, originate from the same sources and are in reality very similar; in the same way the vestments of the Roman and Greek rites were once identical. They were both originally the ordinary daily dress of the second century Romans.

The Vestments

In the course of time, since the vestments for Mass were used only for this sacred purpose, they came to have also symbolical meanings, which are expressed in the prayers used by the priest as he puts them on. The long white tunic under the other vestments, represents for the Roman rite the garment with which Herod clothed Christ in derision; for the Oriental rite it represents the wedding garment required by those participating in the Lord's feast. The cincture which draws it together signifies the cords with which the Jews bound Our Lord, or as girding oneself for this great spiritual journey, as the Greeks put it. The stole which for the Roman officials was a mark of authority, now represents in the Roman rite the cords placed round Our Lord's neck as He was dragged with His cross to Calvary; in the Greek rite it represents the Grace of God flowing down over the Sacred Minister as he goes to perform the Holy Sacrifice.

Colours

The Roman rite uses six colours for its sacred vestments; white for purity and innocence red for martyrdom, rose for joy, green for hope, purple for penance, and black for mourning. These colours were only fixed in about the 16th century. In the oriental rites the colours are not fixed, though naturally one tries to use darker and sadder colours for times of mourning or in lent, and brighter colours on the big Feasts. The Sacred Vessels used at Mass are almost the same in all rites. A small plate, usually of some precious metal, is required or the bread which is to be consecrated; and also a chalice for the wine. The oriental rites have no ciborium, but have a larger paten with a pedestal, on which at each Mass the hosts for Communion are consecrated. Since the oriental rites give Holy Communion under Both Kinds, their chalices are larger than those of the Latin rite.

In the early days of the church, it was the custom for a number of priests to celebrate Mass together with their Bishop; all at the same altar. This is called concelebration. In the Roman rite this is no longer done except at the ordination of priests and the consecration of Bishops. In the Easter rites the custom of concelebration still continues It is beautiful to see a large number of priests of different rites all saying Mass together. It shows clearly the unity of the Catholic Church in its variety of rites. Saint Paul expresses very beautifully how it is the Mass and Holy Communion which should be the link of unity among all real Christians. "For we being many are one bread, one body, all that partake of one bread."

Unity of Catholic Church

Any Catholic of one rite may assist at Holy Mass and receive Holy Communion in any other Catholic rite; and this is precisely one of the many signs of that wonderful unity of the Catholic Church, for which Our Blessed Lord prayed just as He left the Supper-chamber after the first Holy Mass. The Holy Spirit, Who is the life and soul of the Church, has directed the development of the different rites and ceremonies so that they might best suit the requirements of the Body of Christ, the Faithful, in their various circumstances and according to their various characters. To the West He has given one kind of rite suited to its character. The more mystical Greeks and Easterns were given what would be more helpful to them These different rites help each towards the same end—to better realize the same great central act of sacrifice, the Holy Mass.

Y.150,000 for Japanese Embassy at Thai

Closer Relations Expected To Develop

Tokyo, Nov. 17.

The Finance Ministry today approved the Foreign Office's request for Y.150,000 on next year's budget for elevation of the Japanese Legation at Thailand to the status of an Embassy.

Among other Foreign Office projects approved by the Finance Ministry for the budget was Y.50,000 for establishment of a Japanese Consulate at Deli on Timor Island in the South Seas.

The newspaper "Nichi Nichi" described the Foreign Office's decision relative to Thailand as a move for closer relations between the two countries and as a "sign of a realization toward the establishment of a co-prosperity sphere in East Asia —United Press.

French Communique Denied by Chinese

Chungking, Nov. 17.

The Chinese military spokesman today categorically denied a French communique alleging that "heavily armed Chinese regular troops crossed the Indo-China frontier and pillaged Malunkha and Talung villages between Laokay and Langson."

The spokesman declared that the Chinese High Command had never issued any order to Chinese forces to cross the border, and consequently the report was absurd.

He added that the French authorities in Hanoi probably issued the communique under Japanese coersion. —Reuter.

British Eastern C.-in-C. Hailed in Chungking

Chungking, Nov. 17.

The appointment of a British Commander-in-Chief in the Far East, Soviet denial of an agreement with Japan, and Colonel Frank Knox's speech promising greater assistance to China are hailed by the official "Central Daily News" in a leading article this morning as "guaranteeing a Chinese victory."

These international developments are taken to indicate the determination of Britain, the United States and Russia to resist further aggression on the part of Japan in the Pacific.

The Chinese daily concludes: "A new dawn is breaking for independent and free new China. We must seize this great opportunity to make the greatest effort for final victory."—Reuter.

Chang Tse-chung Buried

Chungking, Nov. 17.

The remains of General Chang Tse-chung, who was killed in action on the east bank of the Han river during the Ichang battle, were finally laid to rest yesterday afternoon at Peipai, famous hot springs resort north of Chungking. Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek specially proceeded to Peipai from Chungking to attend the burial —Reuter.

New Szechuen Governor

Chungking, Nov. 17.

General Chang Chun, one time Mayor of the Shanghai Municipality, is assuming office in Chengtu tomorrow as Governor of Szechuen province. Seals and documents were handed over to General Chang last night.—Reuter.

General Catroux Leaves Chungking

Hanoi, Nov. 17.

General Georges Catroux, who joined the Free French under General Charles de Gaulle after resigning his post as Governor-General of French Indo-China, left Chungking yesterday for Rangoon by air en route to Singapore after conferring with General Chiang Kai-shek, it was reliably reported here. The movements of the former Governor-General are believed to be linked with various British military preparations in the Far East.—Domei.

Snowstorm in West China

Chungking, Nov. 17.

A heavy snowstorm in north-west China, with snowdrifts four feet deep in places, has created havoc with highway communications between Kansu and Shensi provinces, according to a Chinese despatch from Lanchow. The North-West Highway Administration is sending squads of workmen to clear up roads in an effort to restore traffic.—Reuter.

No Instant Moves Against N.E.I.

Fears Alleviated Somewhat By Pact; Day of Reckoning Thought Postponed

Washington, Nov. 17.

Fears of an imminent Japanese movement against the Dutch East Indies have been alleviated by the newly-signed oil deal, which is believed to have had the tacit approval of the Netherlands, British and American Governments, probably in the hope of postponing the day of reckoning with Japan, which the latter is believed determined to force on the whole Far East.

At the same time, reports have been received with satisfaction of the firm determination of the Dutch to defend their sovereignty and the steady increase in the colony's defensive strength, especially by the purchase of American aircraft.—Reuter.

Philippines Strengthened

Washington, Nov. 17.

Japan's future moves southward in the Pacific are largely dependent upon how many submarines and planes will be added to the air and naval forces in the Philippines by the United States, the "Army and Navy Journal" stated in an editorial yesterday.

The steps taken by the British in reinforcing Singapore by sending, as fast as possible, as many swift bombing and pursuit planes as United States factories can provide, is also a vital factor, the journal said.

"Washington has made it clear that the protection of the Philippines against all comers will be the primary concern of this country as long as the Philippines remain under the United States flag," said the journal. "This fact may not be without influence in the Far East for sometime to come."—United Press.

The Volunteer Rifle meeting opens today; shooting begins at 1.30 p.m. The prizes to be competed for today are the Adjutant-General's Prize and the Ladies Prize.

The Football Club had their first game for the season yesterday afternoon, and we were glad to notice that, notwithstanding the high wind, there was a good muster of members, over 20 being present, had a good game played. We hear that several matches are in contemplation.

We are glad to hear from Woosung that the Erl King got over the Bar yesterday, and will leave this morning The Diomed, which steamed down the river yesterday afternoon, also passed out; so the two will have another race home. The northerly gale yesterday made an opportunely high tide.

IMPARTIAL NOT NEUTRAL

BADEN-POWELL

With the death of Lord Baden-Powell, which Havas reports as having taken place at Nairobi at the age of 83 years, a romantic figure, and one who has probably done more for the youth of the world than any other man, passes from the scene. He was a distinguished soldier years before he made his name during the Boer War, when he was in command at Mafeking, which on the outbreak of hostilities in 1899 was invested by a Boer force. For 217 days Britain waited with the greatest anxiety for the arrival of a relieving force, and when that reached the beleaguered garrison on May 17, 1900, the enthusiasm displayed by London was such as to give a new word to the language. The heroic defence of Mafeking made Baden-Powell's name one of the best known of all the different figures in that war so that in public estimation he ranked very closely with Lord Roberts. But this man of parts,—for he was a writer and a sculptor as well as a keen artist,—will not go down in history for his military exploits, or his pig-sticking in which he won the Kadir Cup, but for his initiation of the Boy Scout movement in 1908 which has since swept the world until now there are millions of young people bound together by fidelity to scout law.

In every civilized country today there are Boy Scouts and Girl Guides, organizations identical with that of the parent movement, the details of training differing slightly here and there to suit climatic and temperamental differences. Under Baden-Powell's scheme every boy joining the movement makes the following promise:—

I promise on my honour to do my best—
To do my duty to God and the King
To help other people at all times
To obey the Scout Law

The whole system was founded on the code of the knights and is aimed at the promotion of good citizenship amongst the rising generation. In common with similar movements, such as the Church Lads' Brigade, and the Boys' Brigade, the Boy Scout movement came in for a great deal of early ridicule, but the idea caught on rapidly, for Baden-Powell had devised something which appealed to the spirit of youth. In two years there were no fewer than 123,000 members in the British Empire alone, while the system was being taken up by other countries. Two years later the movement was investigated by the Privy Council and a royal charter of incorporation was granted. It was not a military system, for training along those lines was considered contrary to the ideals of peace and educationally wrong, but during the last war 100,000 Boy Scouts, who had reached military age, and of whom ten per cent. gave their lives, joined His Majesty's Forces, while those under age carried out public duties at home, one notable service being that of coast-watchers in place of the coastguards who had been called up for service afloat.

As a result of the war the Boy Scout movement was sadly hampered by the loss of practically every able-bodied scoutmaster, but it managed not only to hold its own, but to increase in numbers during the years in which the struggle lasted. Troops managed to carry on with only patrol leaders and courts of honour without the help of officers. That in itself was splendid proof of the excellence of the system which Baden-Powell had conceived and brought into being, and was a clear demonstration of the manner in which it had captured the imagination of youth. Its originator was more successful than Lord Roberts, who was then the lone voice crying for conscription had been, but that was probably because Great Britain has at all times turned rather to peace than to war. Baden-Powell must have died satisfied with the knowledge that a record of forty-two years showed that he had indeed built well, and that not only did he make the life of the British boy richer than it had ever been before, but that his movement had been adopted in so many other countries where the lessons learned in his experimental camp at Brownsea Island, Dorsetshire, in 1907 had been appreciated and adapted to meet national requirements. How many of them there are at the moment it is not possible to say, but the figures for a year ago showed that approximately 4,100,000 Boy Scouts and Girl Guides throughout all the world were benefitting by the peaceful idea of a man of war.

MORE CALLOUSNESS

It is reported that when the Germans determined to exile the French Lorrainians from the districts which they occupied, the latter were given the choice of going to Poland, or to unoccupied France. Realizing what had happened in Poland they rightly decided to go back to their own people, and since November 11, thousands of exiles have been passing daily through Lyons in the hope of finding new homes. The whole business is just another instance of the sordid robbery of innocent people, of their homes and their livelihood, for the shortness of the notice at which they had to move, deprived them of any opportunity of taking their belongings with them, which the Germans obviously wished to prevent. Thus thousands of people, who for generations had made their homes in Lorraine, the home of Jeanne d'Arc, as historically a French province as any could possibly be, have been deprived of their all, with typical Nazi callousness and sent wandering, destitute, with nothing to rely upon but the slender resources of unoccupied France.

The Government of that area is doing its best to care for these exiles, while the populations of the towns which they reach are welcoming them with that hospitality inspired by the knowledge of common suffering. It is reported that the French Government has protested against this violence of the Franco-German armistice. Such it must be, for the fate of Alsace-Lorraine is a matter for ultimate peace negotiations and not yet to be treated as though it were already a German possession. The fact of the matter is that Hitler is endeavouring to create a state of affairs which he hopes will not be corrected, when Britain comes to negotiate a victorious peace with him, and it is nothing more than his customary resort to the fait accompli, hoping that if he cannot himself maintain it, it will be allowed to stand in order not to complicate peace talks too greatly. In that he will be shown to be completely mistaken, for the restoration of France's integrity is one of the war aims of Great Britain, and Alsace-Lorraine shall be returned to France and their properties to those who have been so wickedly deprived of them.

This further example of the cynical manner in which Hitler regards the sacredness of his promises comes as no surprise. The wholesale dishonouring of obligations which he has entered into has marked his whole political career, and is clearly indicated in his writings. There will always exist the grave danger that further disgraceful actions will be taken against France and the French people whenever it suits that evil man's purpose. It must be remembered that under the terms of the armistice Hitler alone is the sole judge as to whether the Vichy Government is faithfully abiding by its terms. It is upon the caprice of that one man that the maintenance of the present situation in France depends, and if at any time he thought it necessary to denounce the Armistice and take such further action against France as he deemed necessary, there cannot be the slightest doubt that no considerations of honour would in any way deter him.

Havas telegrams indicate that the authorities are doing everything to meet the new situation which is created and to extend all the relief possible to these exiles from Lorraine wandering over south and southwest France in search of homes, work, and food. Marshal Petain is himself going to Lyons, and will doubtless see what can be done for them as they arrive at that important city. The Bishop of Metz is doing all he can to hearten his fellow-countrymen, and it is reported that the moral of the evacuees is excellent. It is good that it should be so for the sudden deprivation of property and livelihood is as severe a blow as can strike anyone, and it speaks well for the courage of the French in this their day of tribulation that they should face their hardships in the manner they are doing. There can be nothing but admiration and sympathy for a people who bear their misfortunes so manfully, added to a determination that the sacrifices which are being forced upon them shall not, in the long run, have been made in vain.

Extravagant Lying

Two of the choicer specimens of enemy propaganda have come to notice during the past week which are worthy of attention. The first was the German claim to have destroyed a whole British convoy, of which the Jervis Bay was an escort, and the second is the Italian claim, made immediately after the successful Fleet Arm air-raid on Taranto, when three Italian capital ships, as well as others, were crippled, that H.M.S. Ramillies had been torpedoed. With regard to the first far from the convoy being destroyed, it now transpires that thirty-two of the thirty-seven vessels which comprised it, succeeded because of the gallantry of the commander of the Jervis Bay helping them by this sacrifice to elude the enemy and making port. There is, of course, a vast difference between sinking thirty-seven merchant vessels, and bagging only five, but the German propagandist organ seems to be inspired with the thought that after all what is the difference of thiry-two ships between enemies? It is really about time Hitler spoke firmly to Mussolini on the subject of the number of British naval units which he claims to have sunk. Some weeks ago statistics compiled with relation to the German claims regarding losses inflicted upon the British Navy showed that that mighty force had been completely wiped out, and that additional vessels which apparently existed only in the imaginations of Goebbels' henchmen had also been destroyed. To say the least it is more than a little embarrassing for Hitler to find that Mussolini claims to be sinking ships of which the Germans already claim to have disposed, for even if Hitler does believe in the good, big, lusty lie it is not so nice to be exposed by one's best friends. But then Mussolini is in somewhat of a fix himself. Three of his biggest vessels having been disposed of by British action he had to announce some counter balancing success, and the alleged torpedoing of the Ramillies is the best he can do in the circumstances. Germany was obliged to do the same thing when severe casualties were inflicted upon the German navy, and it is because of that that the British Navy has been so thoroughly sunk,—on paper.

Enemy Evidence

If evidence were wanted of the manner in which the British Navy manages to keep control in the Mediterranean, nothing could possibly be better than the following extract from the military review of the week, written by an enemy commentator:—

"Recent reports from Gibraltar indicate that the convoy system was neglected by the British to some extent, since it was reported that a considerable number of merchant ships left Gibraltar for the Mediterranean as well as for England travelling alone without any escort. According to the reports only troop transports were escorted by destroyers. The situation in the Mediterranean is unchanged."

The suggestion which it is sought to convey is that Britain has suffered so much in the destroyer class that it is no longer possible to afford adequate escorts for convoys. The fact is, however, that the situation in the Mediterranean is so satisfactory that destroyers can be detailed for other duties. The manner in which the British fleet can go about its business in these waters and the comparative ease with which British landings could be made on Greek islands without any naval interference from the Italians amount to clear proof that Italian claims to be in control are absurd. When it was at full strength the Italian navy carefully refrained from encountering the British forces which moved at will in its various sweeps through the Mediterranean while there was adequate protection for the aircraft carriers which assisted in the bombardment of Taranto without any hindrance from the enemy. It is possible, therefore, to agree with the German military commentator in his statement that the situation in the Mediterranean is unchanged. Mussolini never was in control of those waters, even though at one time the Italian navy was on paper stronger than the British forces available. But while the situation is unchanged relative strengths have been radically altered and the change which has occurred there is merely that the British are in a better position following Taranto than they had ever been at any time since Italy entered the war.

STRAY NOTES

Nov., 11.—Some 2,300 years ago Aristotle was saying "One Swallow maketh not a spring, nor a Woodcock a winter," and although I have already seen more than one woodcock I find a numb middle-finger in the early morning an equally good sign that winter is creeping on towards us. The Chinese Season of "Li-Tung" (beginning of winter) began on the 7th November, and the falling leaves are now disclosing many secrets hidden by the verdure of summer ....the well hidden purse-like nests of the Orioles may now be seen hanging in Plane and Pterocarya trees, where previously we looked for them in vain: and now is the time to note the position of all such nests before the winter storms destroy them, for birds have a well-formed habit of building nests year after year in similar positions, and generally using the same kind of tree. Equally interesting is to note the extent to which many Magpies have already gone in starting new nests for next year's broods; Poplar trees now getting bare have already shown me the foundations of many such nests....and this brings me to an interesting point which I have never been able to settle decisively in my own mind: Magpies can, I know, complete a nest in about two weeks in case of need, yet they habitually start carrying sticks as soon as twigs begin to fall in late autumn—at least two months before they need do so: does this mean that they love twigs for their own sake, and cannot resist gathering them and depositing them in their trees whenever they see them? Or has nature taught them that newly-fallen twigs are stronger and more supple for building purposes? Perhaps the answer is "Yes" in both cases. But if there is any sense behind the common "auguries," how can we accept the building of nests as a sign of coming winter? Yet so it is in the case of the Magpies!

RENDEZVOUS WITH HITLER

Armament Costs Only Initiation Fee

Through no choice of their own, the American people constitute one of the last barriers that stand between a 51-year-old vegetarian with a funny little mustache and world domination. In gloomy anticipation of the day when Hitler tries forcibly to remove this barrier, we are in the process of spending $10,000,000,000 to rearm and limit his ambitions, writes Julian S. Bach, Jun., in the "Coronet." Large as this sum may now seem, it is only the initiation fee that must be paid if we are eventually to belong to that increasingly exclusive club of nations who through their armed might are able to control their destinies.

After the last new battleship has been fitted and the last gun towed into place, we shall have become a rather formidable opponent for even Hitler. But whatever our future strength in ships and weapons, they will only represent part of our total strength—or total weakness. Whether we are to remain high on a perch or fall low into oblivion will depend largely upon those Great Imponderables which help settle the fate of nations and which have less to do with tanks than with traditions, bullets than ballots, guns than guts.

In terms of the Great Imponderables the United States meets Hitler on more equal footing than did either Britain or France. Against us Hitler loses at the outset two of the most imponderable weapons which for seven bitter years served him well against the Allies. Greatest of these is the desire for revenge, which in 22 years has lifted Germany from defeat to delirium.

To whip his people into any future crusade against America Hitler will have to exploit some less irresistible emotion than pure revenge. Our part in the World War was fleeting; our part in the Treaty of Versailles slim. At best the German people fear us. At worst they hate us. Inevitably, the white heat of German vengeance which scorched the Allies will be a less compelling flame by the time it reaches us.

Forced by circumstance to rebuild the German army from the bootstraps up, Hitler was able to turn out the most thoroughly standardized war-machine the world has ever seen. By getting into the arms race late the Germans were able to benefit from all the experimentation and improvements that had gone on before. As a still later starter Uncle Sam can now turn the tables on Adolf. Our very lack of modern material, especially for the army, should enable us to equip ourselves with only the latest and the best. Meanwhile Hitler will emerge from this war with a tremendous amount of material that must inevitably become obsolete. This gives us the rare chance—if we seize it—to outblitz the blitzkrieg.

American Leaders Not So Stupid

The U. S. is also in the enviable position of a schoolboy who on the eve of a big exam gets a peek at the list of questions that will be asked the next day. For seven years we have witnessed the foreboding shape of things to come. The dictators may still have new tricks up their sleeves, but a great deal of their sleight-of-hand has lost its mystery. We have seen how pregnable "impregnable" fortifications are. The controversy between air and sea power has been partly solved for us. It would be a calumny to suggest that the American people and their leaders are so stupid that they now leave this seven-year preview without at least some understanding of what the show is all about.

On the other hand, we are imponderably burdened by the necessity of having to defend the most defenceless continent in the world —South America—together with the better-defended but equally spacious stretches of Canada, Alaska and Greenland. Even when our own North American fortress is fully garrisoned, we shall find ourselves surrounded to the south by shockingly unarmed neighbours who almost without exception are incipient Fascist states. Canada excepted, it is most unlikely that any of our hemisphere neighbours will ever possess an army even equal to the Four-Day Netherlanders, fortifications even approaching the Belgian, sharpshooters as eagle-eyed as the Norwegians. No matter how well we keep our own house in order, the houses down the street will be potential fire-traps.

If public opinion has now at last caught up with its leaders, it is to be hoped that it will not suffer a future relapse and play ostrich again in the sands of Arizona. No important American publisher columnist or foreign correspondent has so far whitewashed Hitler because of his known kindness to children (German, "Aryan," Nazi) and animals (all breeds), welcomed the resurgence of German might as a peaceful portent, or slapped Mussolini on the back simply because he makes the trains run on time.

Among the lesser imponderables which on "M" Day may tilt the scales of battle for or against us are on the credit side our relative lack of any strongly entrenched pacifist movement such as Britain's Oxford Peace pledgers, and our innate mechanical-mindedness which should make us feel almost as much at home in a tank as in an automobile. On the debit side we may find ourselves weakened by the premium, justified in the past, which we place upon short working hours and "getting fun out of life" when the paramount need is more work and less pleasure. We, who as a nation, number one civil war, several floods and a truly fearful World War, flu epidemics, as our greatest national catastrophes, may also find it pyschologically difficult to realize day by day just how menaced our national security now is. As a people we have invariably looked down upon "furriners" and we may easily underestimate the ruthless abilities of foreign foes.

These then are some of our imponderable weaknesses, of our even greater imponderable strengths. In our rendezvous with Hitler and with any allies he may choose to bring against us, we shall find that given the proper military equipment, training and leadership the chances are that the American people will prove their imponderable greatness.

IN PARENTHESIS

Vivid Dream

In her other life of dreams Joseph Conrad's wife saw her husband—who was at that time in another city—driving in a hansom cab. Suddenly the cab skidded on a wet stretch of road, and Conrad pitched out onto the road.

The following morning Mrs. Conrad returned to the rooms where she and her husband were staying. Their servant opened the door, and with a grave face, began:

"Your husband has been involved in an accident, madame, a hansom skidded...."

"Yes," Mrs. Conrad interrupted, "I know."

Youthful Philosophies

President Roosevelt is the man who shuts the gates. He keeps the war out.

Don't say "yeah" and "huh." These stretch faces.

Red fingernails are pretty. But I wish ladies would cut them down a little. Sometimes they look like bears' claws.

Some ladies colour their faces too much. They are the same as Indians when they paint up for war—only they are quieter.

We can talk right out in our country. But not too loud. It is best to talk soft and move our tongues round in our mouths. Then people can understand us.

Tung Hwa Trounce Recs 7-2 In Decisive Fashion

Winners Tally Highest 1st Division Score Yet Seen; Depleted Recs Side Unable to Cope with Chinese

ABOUT 8,000 cheering fans saw Tung Hwa add another link to their long chain of successes when they defeated the depleted S.R.C. eleven by the lobsided score of 7-2 at the Canidrome yesterday morning. The winners had the things very much their way, especially in the second half when the Recs were absolutely out of picture after scoring two goals. The losers were without the services of Tommy Aldeguer, and Brodd, who took his place on the wing, was definitely not of First Division calibre, giving Chong little trouble. Another weakness in the S.R.C. line-up was Zellensky, their substitute right-half, who gave Van too much freedom.

The game was scrappy throughout, while later during the match players of both teams indulged in rough tactics, resulting in the sending off of Jack Shute, while Hwang's name was also taken by referee Sinclair.

Tung Hwa:—Zing, Chong, N. Lee, Han, Telia, Liang, Fei, N. Z. Lee, Tai, Hwang, Van.

S.R.C.:—Mousasticoff, Shute, Madar, Zellensky, Jack, Honniball, Kapustin, Symons, Ryan, Walley, Brodd.

The opening minutes of the encounter saw both sides visited without success, although the Recs were first given an opportunity to open the account. Given a free kick, Shute passed the leather to Symons. The Recs' skipper headed to Zing, who dived to push it out, the sphere going to Brodd. The left winger insisted the ball completely, allowing Chong to clear.

The Chinese were next to attack and Jack missed a long shot from Tsha the ball going to Tai, who in his turn passed it to Van. The wing man centred and the sphere was trapped by N. Z. Lee, the latter forcing a corner off Shute.

Player Carried Off

The Recs attacked and Kapustin shot the ball into the outside of the net when he received a good pass from Symons. At the other end, Van put Tai through only to see Madar beat the centre-forward to the ball. The ball was brought into the Tung Hwa territory and Kapustin beat N. Lee when Tsha advanced to meet the threat. The players collided and Tsha was carried off the field not to return for the duration of the match.

Three minutes after the collision, Tung Hwa scored their first goal when N. Z. Lee beat Shute and crossed to Fei. The right wing headed the ball on the run, beating Mousasticoff with a fine place in the 23rd minute. It took the Chinese only two minutes to forge further ahead, Fei being again responsible for the point. The movement was started by Van who centred. Tai was on the receiving end and, seeing himself marked, kicked the sphere to Fei, who took a first timer that entered the far corner of the net.

The huge crowd, of whom ninety per cent. were Chinese, cheered themselves hoarse as the Chinese drew rings around their opponents to score the third goal in the 27th minute. Liang took a free kick, awarded to Tung Hwa when Tai was pushed by Honniball, and passed to Fei. The winger took a terrific shot at the goal, Madar conceding a corner to avoid another point. Fei took the corner kick, the ball dropping in front of N. Z. Lee, the Chinese player heading the ball in to give his side a 3-0 lead.

Tung Hwa Attack Incessantly

The Chinese kept on attacking, but many movements were spoiled by Van, who oftener than not was lying offside. Nevertheless, they scored their fourth point four minutes later from a penalty. Tai was put through and was fast advancing when he was fouled by Jack. The referee immediately pointed to the spot and N. Z. Lee made no mistake with a rising shot that had Mousasticoff well beaten.

The Recs awoke at the stage and tried hard to reduce the deficit. Kapustin broke away on the right on receiving a pass from Zellensky, but his shot hit the outside of the net. Their efforts, however, were finally rewarded when Walley banged the leather in to decrease the score to 4-1 in the 41st minute of the first half. Honniball opened up the play, putting Brodd through. The reserve wing beat Chong and centred. Walley was there to receive the ball, scoring with a strong drive into the top of the net.

Madar Shines in Defence

The second half was started with the Recs attacking and the Chinese citadel fell within four minutes of the resumption. The ball was trapped by Symons and the Recs' inside right tapped to Walley for the latter to reduce the arrears to 4-2. Stimulated by this success, the Recs went all out, but the Chinese were not to be outplayed and staged continuous raids on the Recs' goal. Only the wonderful defence of Madar kept them at bay, but the defender was responsible for the next Chinese goal when he fouled Fei within the penalty area in the 12th minute. Once again N. Z. Lee was deputized to take the spot kick, and once again he did not disappoint Tung Hwa's supporters. Mousasticoff did well to stop the penalty shot, but the ball rebounded to Lee, who gave the Recs' goalie no chance with a shot from within a few feet.

From then on there was only one side on the field and, although the Recs had a few chances to score, they spoiled them by too much passing in front of the goal. Tung Hwa's sixth goal came in the 20th minute after resumption when N. Z. Lee passed the sphere to Tai. The latter dribbled past Shute and gave the ball away to the unmarked Fei who beat Mousasticoff with a grounder into the right corner of the posts. Twelve minutes later, Tai scored the last goal of the match when he received a centre from Fei.

Less than ten minutes before the final whistle, Shute was sent off the field for kicking N. Z. Lee and the end came with Recs beaten by 7-2, one of the biggest scores in the First Division so far.

P.T.H. Draw 3-3 With J.R.C.

Tension Maintained Until Final Whistle Blows; One Player Sent Off the Field

The P.T.H. and the J.R.C. split the two league points yesterday when they battled to a 3-3 draw at the Race Course. A large crowd of spectators was treated to a ding-dong affair and it was anybody's game until the sound of the final whistle.

The Jewish team drew first blood and added another point to lead by two clear goals in the 23rd minute of the initial period. The School, however, succeeded in balancing the count at two all before interval, snatching back the lead shortly after resumption, the Jews committed a blunder by resorting to defensive tactics, allowing the School forward to launch numerous invasions.

Narrow Escapes on Both Sides

Teddy Kidby was credited with the equalizing goal in the 12th minute of the second session when he lodged the ball in the top corner of the net from a free-kick taken from about 35 yards range. From then on, both citadels underwent narrow escapes and the tension was kept up till the last minute.

Leriou proved to be the tower of strength in the defence for the School and received good support from Tivoniuk and Caro. Katemopoulos saved a certain goal in the second half when Schneierson, the School goalie, fell down in a collision with Stern near the penalty spot. The School forwards gave a fine display of combination in the midfield but, when they reached the opposing back area, they began to dilly-dally or boot against the defenders.

The Jewish exhibited speed and fairly decent cohesion. The forwards wasted no opportunities to shoot from a scoring distance. Had their marksmanship been accurate, they might have easily emerged the victors. The defenders were good tacklers but more often than not clashed with one another. When "Ghandi" Jacob was drawn back to aid the defence, the Jewish attacking department was considerably weakened and lacked the necessary punch.

The teams are as follow:—

P.T.H.:—Schneierson; Logan, Katemopoulos; Tivoniuk, Leriou, Caro; Fessikedes, Watson, Cochran, Kidby and Novgorodoff.

J.R.C.:—Cohn; Kramer, Sommer; S. Levy, Meyer, Donath; Defries, Friedlander, Stern, Jacob and R. Levy.

Referee—Hale. Linesmen—Weaver and Hurry.

Fast Pace Throughout

A fast pace was set at the start and continued throughout the 90 minutes. The School conceded the first flag-kick in the eighth minute and Defries dropped the leather outside the back area. A scramble ensued but Jacob miskicked when he was intercepted by Logan. R. Levy, the Jewish outside left, dashed up and drove the leather into the far corner of the net for the opening point.

The School forwards were given several chances to tie the count out through fidgeting about in front of the goal-mouth were driven back by the Jewish defenders. In the 23rd minute the Jews netted their second goal through Jacob, who lobbed over the School custodian's head.

A rather queer incident occurred in the P.T.H. goal-mouth as a result of a corner-kick taken by Defries. Running in from the corner, Defries drove against an upright. The ball bounced off and struck the other upright. Schneierson gathered the ball and cleared while a large section of the spectators thought that the sphere had gone over the line.

In the 33rd minute the School scored their first goal through Novgorodoff after a swift movement between Kidby and Cochran. Cutting in from the wing, Novgorodoff located the corner of the net. Apparently inspired by the success, the School attacked vigorously but found the opposing defence intact.

Scores Level at Half-time

Schneierson was lucky not to let the Jewish forwards score another point in the first half when he fumbled the ball in the goal-mouth. The ball finally rolled outside the vertical post. Two minutes from the interval, the School levelled the count at two all when Hoff Cochran drove past Cohn.

In the third minute of the second period Jacob slammed in a first-timer from Defries for the leading goal at 3 to 2. Then the Jews drew the hospectacled Jacob back to assist their defence but this move proved to be futile as the School attackers managed to confine the play in the Jewish territory.

In the 12th minute the School was awarded a free-kick on the southern side of the field about 35 yards from the Jewish goal. Kidby was delegated to take the kick and sent the leather straight into the top corner of the net for the equalizer at three all. Although there was no further scoring by either side, there were many tense moments around both citadels and the interest of the contest was kept up till the very last minute.

Tung Hwa Score Their Seventh Goal

Tai, the Chinese forward, slams the leather past Mousasticoff into the Recs goal to score Tung Hwa's final point in yesterday's game at the Canidrome. Madar, on the left, played an outstanding game for the Recs, his stirling defence saving his side from an even heavier defeat.

S.F.X. Beat Police By 4-2

A fairly large crowd saw the Saints retain the second place in the First Division yesterday afternoon at the Race Course where they defeated the S.M.P. by the score of 4-2. Starting out in a whirlwind manner, the S.F.X. forwards had the Police defence at sixes and sevens. Well served by the Edwards brothers, Freddy Foyn and Pettersson, the Saints time and again broke through the Police defence only to see their efforts nullified by the sterling performances of Victal and Duffy in the defence.

The Police, it may be said, were out without their full team, Willie Ward and Woodley being conspicuous by their absence. Gibson took the latter's place in the defence, but was of little use against the speedy Foyn. The first half ended with a 3-2 lead for the Saints, who added another point in the second to bring home two valuable points and the second place in the senior category.

S.F.X.:—Ussankoff, Laskowski, Garwood, Hallford, M. Greenberg, H. Pettersson, Foyn, Karolitch, W. Pettersson, F. Edwards, C. Edwards.

S.M.P.:—Bulpin, Victal, Gibson, Crook, Duffy, Roliz, Stangaard, S. Greenberg, Bader, Fonseca, Chooklantzeff.

The first goal of the match was scored in the tenth minute when Pettersson converted Foyn's pass for the best point of the match. The Saints' centre-forward took a first-timer from about fifteen feet, the shot beating Bulpin easily, as the Police goalie was in the opposite corner at the time. The lawkeepers, however, equalized within five minutes when Greenberg dribbled through and crossed to Chooklantzeff. The Police left-winger cut in on the wing and fired at the goal, the ball passing the goal-line out of play. Differences of opinion whether the goal had been scored were soon straightened out when referee Harris pointed to the centre.

The Police success was very short-lived for the Saints again took the lead exactly five minutes later when Willie Pettersson passed the leather to Cecil Edwards, the winger beating Victal and placing the ball well out of Bulpin's reach in the 20th minute. The same player put his team another point up when he went through the entire Police defence by himself and booted the ball in. Bulpin was completely outwitted by the flight of the leather and did nothing to stop the ball. This was in the 22nd minute.

End to end play followed and it was only in the 44th minute that the next point was chalked up. Chooklantzeff was again responsible for the goal when Sammy Greenberg put him through.

The lawkeepers had the better of the exchanges on resumption, but the poor finish of their forwards threw many chances away. Stangaard, on one occasion, was within scoring distance when he directed a weak grounder for Ussankoff to stop. The Saints made sure of the game in the 32nd minute of the second half when Willie Pettersson put Foyn through, the winger scoring from a difficult angle to bring the final score to 4-2.

J.R.C. Score 2-1 Win Over Harlequins

After surprising the United "Trojans" with a 2-1 defeat last week-end, the Jewish Recreation Club dealt out the same punishment to the powerful S.H.C. "Harlequins" yesterday in an Association fixture on the Race Course. The same sweeping attack of the Jewish forwards which worked the downfall of the United side, cut through the Club defence yesterday to have the Harlequins trailing by 0-2 at the interval.

Content with their fairly convincing advantage, the J.R.C. rested on their laurels after the intermission with the result that play was more evenly-matched. The second half was not more than 10 minutes old when the Club narrowed the margin to only 2-1. With a possibility of a draw or defeat now staring them in the face, the J.R.C. tightened up on their defence with the result that no further scoring was done in the next 25 minutes.

The Harlequins sorely felt the absence of Jack Pote-Hunt on the forward line; the reputed sting of their attack was not too apparent with the Jewish defence foiling their attacks one after another.

The Club forwards managed to break into the scoring circle several times, however, but even here they had all their work cut out when Bauer, between the posts for the Jews, brought off numerous scintillating saves.

The most dangerous man on the J.R.C. attack was Waldmann as usual. He was tightly marked by the Club halves and it was not until the 25th minute of the first half that he managed to elude them to score.

The eventual winners, however, earned their first point through Winter who tallied within the first 10 minutes of the match. Waldmann put the J.R.C. in a fairly secure position by sending in a sizzler to set the half-time score at 2-0.

Upon resumption, the underdogs came into their own after 10 minutes of play when Parsons cut in from the left wing and brought the ball into the circle to beat Bauer completely. Thereafter, the leaders increased pressure in an effort to gain a more comfortable margin, but they failed to score again and had to be content with a 2-1 victory.

Iowa Smashes Notre Dame's Unbeaten Record

Penn Trounces Cadets; Harvard Trims Brown 14-0; Princeton Smash Yale and Stanford Still Unbeaten

New York, Nov. 17.

UP from the plains of Texas to the shores of Maine there was weeping and wailing by loyal sons of Notre Dame yesterday when the Irish march to a national championship was impaled by a mediocre University of Iowa eleven.

Undefeated in six starts this year, mighty Notre Dame bowed to the Cornhuskers, 7-0, at South Bend. Most surprised team on the field, however, was Iowa. Defeated four times by Big Nine rivals and Nebraska this year, the Iowa club rose to the heights today and smashed every Rambler drive protecting that precious one touchdown lead.

In New York 31,000 fans braved cloudy and cold weather to watch Navy and Columbia battle it out to a scoreless tie. Neither club was able to get under way in the first quarter with play confined principally to the midfield sector. The Middies took advantage of a favouring wind in the second quarter to start an offensive. Navy, however, lacked a sustained drive and bogged down in Lion territory.

Coming back in the third quarter, Bill Busick, the "breakaway" threat of Navy's backfield, passed 22 yards to Dick Foster, the gluey handed left end.

Ponderous Cliff Lenz, whose silhouette suggests a broad-beamed aircraft carrier, drove through for an 11-yard gain which gave the Navy the ball in the shadow of Columbia's goal posts. The Lions stiffened, however, and held for downs on their own 1-yard line

Navy tired in the fourth quarter and in the last five minutes of the game Columbia took the offensive and swept deep into Navy territory. Len Will, powerhouse Columbia fullback, tried for a field goal from the 20-yard line but failed.

Fifty thousand fans jammed Franklin Field in Philadelphia to watch Captain Billy Wood's Army eleven take the worst licking in the Academy's history. Worn down by three successive defeats at the hands of Lafayette, Notre Dame and Brown, the Army wilted before a tremendous Quaker aerial attack which saw them punch across one touchdown in the first quarter and add three more in the second on passes.

Pennsylvania scored again in the third quarter on an intercepted pass which paved the way for a beautiful third quarter downfield drive.

In the final quarter Pennsylvania scored twice, the first on a 50-yard dash by Wexler, coach George Munger's flitting 190-pound halfback, and the second on a 64-yard sustained drive which battered Army's front wall full of holes.

Dick Harlow's subtle spinner-cycle offence clicked definitely at Cambridge, where 10,000 fans watched Harvard trim Brown, their traditional rival, 14-0. Both teams were bogged down on the soggy field during the first half with neither club able to muster enough offensive power to uncover a goal drive.

Entering the third quarter, however, Loren MacKinney, the fiery Carolinian who guards the left flank for Harvard, intercepted a midfield Brown pass. Chuck Spreyer, the brilliant Crimson halfback, packed and passed the ball to Brown's 12-yard stripe and then plunged across the goal with the first tally of the game.

Chuck Ayres, the raw-boned Harvard centre whose specialty is roving in free zones back of the line, intercepted a Brown pass on the Brown 18-yard line to set the stage for Harvard's final tally.

Harlow's tricky offence spun into high gear carrying Harvard to the 6-yard line where Franne Lee took the ball over on a reverse around left end.

In the Ivy League, Tad Wieman's lean and hungry Bengals smashed Yale, 10-7, before a rabbled-rousing crowd of 48,000 fans. The two clubs scored early in the game and in the dying moments it looked as if the score would remain deadlocked at 7-all.

Picking up steam in the final quarter, however, the Tigers drove from Yale's 46-yard line to the Eli 4-yard marker with three minutes to go. The Tigers were penalized 5 yards for delaying the game. Jovial Jo Sandbach, reserve back, then booted a field goal—the three points giving Princeton the win.

In the Pacific Coast Conference Stanford continued its drive for the 1940 title by snowing under the Oregon State Beavers, 28-14, keeping the Cardinals' undefeated record spotless. Washington University virtually cinched second position by trouncing the University of Southern California, 14-0.—United Press.

Lord Zetland Wins Manchester Handicap

Manchester, Nov. 17.

After one of the gamest displays seen in a horse race for a long time, Lord Zetland's Beinn Dearg, ridden by Novett, won the Manchester November Handicap yesterday, beating Major Cayzer's Long Riggan by a short head.

Mrs. Cowdett's Bellman was third, three lengths further behind.

Beinn Dearg led almost the whole way until a furlong from home, when Long Riggan went in front, but Beinn Dearg came again and won in the last few strides. He covered the 1½ miles in two minutes 42⅘ seconds. The betting was 9-1 Beinn Dearg; 10-1 Long Riggan; 8-1 Bellman.

Last year's winner, Lord Rosebery's Tutor, was a 4-1 favourite, but he failed to finish in the first nine.

Records and Averages in City Duck Pin Leagues

Past Records Still Remain Unchallenged as Series Nearing End; Marines and Officers Win Honours

WITH the City Duck Pin Leagues nearing completion some interesting items may be gleaned from the weekly statistics on the records and averages turned in by the bowlers to date. The Seniors are credited with the high triple of 362 through Gray III, while the "B" Division hurlers are chalked with the high single. So far past records stand unchallenged, although there is a possibility of new "highs" being set before the series are over as the "Y" Woodchoppers have still a couple of matches to go.

The Marines are the declared 1940-41 Champions having finished their schedule with a win of 19 out of 24 games played. The runners-up will be the Woodchoppers who stand with 12 winning games and six to go. Tommy Butler heads the individual averages on a fraction over Huebner.

In the "B" Division, Maple Section, the race for premier honours is a keen one. The U.S.M.C. Reds are only a game ahead of the "Y" Luckies. Everything depends on the two matches the leaders have to play off. A shutout win will be the deciding factor. In the averages, Montwell is at the top of the class with 105-7/22.

Uhlinger continues to hold the lead in the Pine Section of "B" Division with Wagner marked for the high triple of 343. In this section the Marine Officers are in an unassailable position. Interest is now on the race for the runner-up berth between the Spares, Flukes and the American Club.

Bowlers are reminded that the reservations for time and alley for all events in the championships may now be made at Messrs. Squires, Bingham Company. The Mixed Doubles will commence on November 26, to be followed later by the Ladies' Doubles, Men's Doubles, Ladies' Singles and the Men's Singles. The championship awards will be as follow:—Winner and Runner-up in each competition. High Single and Triple in all competitions combined.

Trojans Win 3-2 Against Police

Producing a surprisingly energetic performance, the Police "A" pushed the United "Trojans" to the limit yesterday in their Association friendly game on the Race Course, the lawmen going down finally by 3-2 after commanding a lead of 2-1 late in the second half. It was a game of fluctuating fortunes with the United drawing first blood, only to see the combined Sikh and foreign team draw level and then shoot ahead. In the last 15 minutes of the tussle however, the civilian eleven pulled up their socks and two unstoppable goals averted defeat for them.

The Police displayed their best combination yesterday when they fought the Trojans to a standstill with neither side being able to score in the first session. Upon resumption, however, the forwards of both sides made better use of their opportunities to run up five points in all.

In justice to Weed, the police custodian, all the goals which he let through were impossible to stop, the United forwards giving him no chance at all with first-time drives. Actually, the Police threatened the United citadel very rarely, but they made the most of their opportunities when Mohan Singh, their crack centre-forward, burst through on two occasions to net a brace of goals in quick succession that gave the Police their 2-1 lead.

In both halves, the civilian side had a slight edge on their rivals, but this supremacy at times was negligible. The opening period was confined to mid-field exchanges but the United eleven just missed scoring towards half-time when Pate sent a short-corner attempt only a foot off its mark.

The staunch defence put up by the Trojans annulled all the efforts of the Police. Their half-line, with Chantural in the pivot position, more than held the opposing forwards at bay.

At the other end of the field, the Police were packing their goal successfully to have the United attack bogged down. Widdowson proved one of the main stumbling-blocks to the Trojans when he cleared the ball time after time from the danger-zone; his clearances, however, were rather dangerous.

Action was forthcoming ten minutes after the rest-period when a pretty piece of combination among the United forwards saw the Trojans break the ice. Campbell initiated the successful movement from the right-wing when he centred a swift shot; Hetherington caught it on his stick and sent to Bojesen, who, in turn passed to Yourieff. The latter was standing right at the goal-mouth and made no mistake, banging the ball into the net with a mid-air drive.

Ten minutes later, the Trojans saw their lead melting away. Mohan Singh ran through twice on his own in quick succession. He best Jones with hard grounders on both occasions.

Trailing by 2-1, the civilians put their backs into the game and five minutes later, Hetherington scored with a first-time drive after Chantural had sent the ball almost to his feet. Encouraged by this rally, the Trojans increased their efforts and just five minutes before the final whistle they snatched a close victory when Pate, now on the forward line, sent a perfect centre to Chanutrai who converted with a quick-witted shot.

The teams follow:

United "Trojans"—Jones; Gilchrist, Pate; Greenberg; Chantural, S. Berglof; Murray, Hetherington, P. Bojesen, Yourieff, Campbell.

Police "A": — Weed; Widdowson, Hakum Singh; Morrell, Kapuran Singh, Mason; Mant, Gages Singh, Mohan Singh, Stuart, Mohan Singh.

Crusaders Hand Out 6-0 Defeat to Spartans

The United "Spartans" took a terrific beating at the hands of the S.H.C. "Crusaders" yesterday afternoon when they succumbed by the overwhelming score of six goals to nil in a friendly association hockey encounter at the Race Course.

After an indifferent start the Crusaders struck with the disastrous results in the second half of the game to wade right through the Spartans defence and bombard their goal. During the last fifteen minutes of the game they piled in six goals while the losers were not able to retaliate in any way, despite the slight change in line-up.

The forward line of the winners displayed superior combination and far more accurate passing with the result that not even Jacob's brilliant work between the sticks could prevent them from scoring. Each time they invaded the Spartans goal they came close in and scored from almost point blank range with hard drives to the corner of the goal giving the goalie little or no chance of saving.

The winners were able to score during the first half when they enjoyed territorial advantage during the entire period. Jacob was put through a severe test and survived it with flying colours, clearing everything that came his way. He was well supported by "Sortie" Collaco who was a tower of strength in the position of right back. Kazamiroff in the left half berth was definitely weak and the Crusaders appeared to be fully aware of it and concentrated the aggressions on his side of the ground.

When Collaco was moved up to a forward position in the second half the Crusaders invaded the Spartans repeatedly and each time returned to the centre with a point. Kendall drew first blood and it was not long before he added another goal. Bradford drove the ball past Jacobs with a hard drive when the Crusaders next visited the losers end. It was a matter of routine after a while as the winners were coming back each time. Jacob, undaunted after being hit on the leg by the ball, continued to guard the goal with determination but the combined efforts of the S.H.C. eleven soon told its story and Wallace, King and Kendall scored before the match was over.

French Forces Win Against Police

Displaying an ability to make the most of the very few chances that came their way at the Race Course yesterday afternoon in a friendly rugger encounter the French Forces were somewhat lucky to defeat the Police XV by the very narrow margin of three points (one try) to nil. Both sides were inclined to be more than ragged and though the French gave more indications of developing into a useful fifteen within a few weeks, the game that was witnessed never reached a high standard, constructive play by the backs being very much missing. Demail, the French centre-three, was outstanding and time and time again he proved himself a distinct threat to the none-too-safe Police defence. Delort, the French right-winger, was a fine opportunist and made the most of the few chances that came his way and the run that eventually paved the way for the winning try was a result of his efforts. Fast and possessed of a good swerve, he is a most difficult man to stop once he gets into his stride and more will be heard of him before very long.

French Forces XV: Setti; Delort, Pelegry, Demail, Oslame; Valve, Founs; Dabenne, Coventz, Verdier, Giamachi, Liniou, Francois, Comes and Montaghon.

Police XV: Killingbeck; Prokofieff, Ellis, Smith, Cockburn; Hocking, Hartley; Buxton, Reynolds, Gammie, Richardson, Kyte, Dearn, McKay and Egbert.

Referee: G. S. Dunkley.

The French had by far the better of proceedings during the initial half when they had the sun at their backs and they penned the Police into the latter's own half for very long periods. Only stout defensive measures kept them out and though poor handling and poor running cost the French dear they should have been well ahead at the interval. As it was they scored their solitary try in the fifteenth minute when Delort intercepted a Police pass in the French half of the field during a spasmodic Police raid. With the Police defence all spreadeagled he weaved his way through the men opposing him and scored far out for an unconverted try.

The second half saw the Police very much in the ascendancy but lack of finish spoiled their many movements and though they attacked almost from start to finish and had by far the better of the play from a territorial standpoint they could not penetrate an always hard playing defence.

S.R.U.F.C. Trial Game

The Shanhai Rugby Union Football Club's trial game yesterday afternoon at the Race Course proved to be somewhat of a fiasco, only twenty players putting in an appearance with the result that two teams—the Whites and Colours—played a game of sorts with ten men aside.

The Whites, faster and fitter proved triumphant by 29 points (four goals and three tries) to 19 (two goals and three tries), but at no time did the play on the whole impress.

Blues Win Stent Cup

BY "THE CHASER"

In fast and well played game, considering the handicap of the teams being only seven goals, the Blues (Kops, Neppo, L. B. Moller and A. V. White) triumphed over the Whites (Taylor, Williams, Moore and Clark) by the count of four goals to one to win the Stent Cup.

The winners received a handicap of one goal but were never in need of it as they were the masters of the situation during the entire game. Their advantage was not an outstanding one, however, as the losers were also having a good portion of the game but their unlucky point was their inability to hit the ball between the goal posts during each visit.

L. B. Moller was in fine fettle and galloped up and down the field with the ball with effective results, and received good support from the other members of the team. Both sides were actually evenly matched and it was only the Blues' better marksmanship that decided the issue. The first chukker went by with both quartettes coming within inches of scoring but the ball invariably went behind the line. The Blues tallied once in the second period while Whites retaliated in the next minute. In the third chukker the Blues again registered. The Whites attacked desperately several times but each failed in their attempts to score. The fourth goal of the Blues in the final chukker settled the issue.

Mrs. Kops, introduced by Judge Allman, presented the Cup to the winning side at the conclusion of the match.

Saturday's Closing Quotations

New York, Nov. 16.

Trading was quiet on Wall Street this morning, with quotations ruling irregularly lower and finishing from fractions to about 1 point down. Operators were generally keeping to the sidelines, owing to the weekend and uncertainty over foreign political developments.

Prices were depressed by profit taking, but selling pressure was at no time heavy, as continued favourable business reports were an offsetting factor.

The turnover was light, amounting to 490,000 shares.—Reuter.

Dow-Jones Summary

By courtesy of Swan, Culbertson & Fritz

Market leaders receded from fractions to over a point on the Stock Exchange today, with trading moderately active. Traders ignored favourable domestic news and were cautiously watching possible weekend war developments. They were also inclined to take profits.

Stocks:—Despite lower prices, the absence of heavy pressure indicates that the technical condition of the market is sound, but war developments are likely to be an important influencing factor, temporarily. The "Times" Index of business activity was placed at 111.1, against 109.7 last week and 107.3 the corresponding period last year.

Cotton:—Some increase in hedging is relieving the shortage of contracts, which forced early price-fixing at advances. The market is probably more two sided at the moment.

Wheat:—Due to the uncertainty of the action of loan holders and of the foreign development, the tendency is take profits and reinstate on declines. Small releases were reported on recent highs.

Corn:—Continued firmness is expected pending freer country movement, which is not yet evident.

Rubber:—Large factories were not buying at the present levels, while there was a somewhat easier feeling regarding the supply situation.

Hides:—Dealers continued to be the chief sellers on an easier market, following the weakness of stocks.

Sugar No. 4:—Ruled stagnant.

U. S. Commodities

Saturday's Closing Quotations

New York, Nov. 16.

Cotton prices early ruled irregular, with hedging meeting with price fixing. Later, the market reacted on Wall Street selling, realizing and in sympathy with the easiness of stocks. At the close, quotations ranged from 4 to 10 points down from the previous final levels.

The market for raw rubber futures ruled quietly easier today on nervous liquidation and shorts selling, owing to reports of large afloats. At the final bell, losses from 17 to 20 points were recorded.

Chicago wheat prices ruled from steady to firm on speculative buying and shorts covering, which found a scarcity of offerings. At the last callover, gains from ¾ to 1 cent were registered.

Britain's "Labour Front"

Condition of Workers North and South of the Channel Contrasted in Talk Over XCDN

A STRIKING contrast between the condition of the workers in Britain and those in Germany and the Nazi-occupied lands was drawn by a speaker over radio station XCDN in a Topical Talk recently. With Britons living free and giving of their best in spite of air raids, British production has not been greatly affected, the speaker declared. On the continent, however, the workers in the occupied lands are mere serfs, the victims of Nazi whims. Worst sufferers of all, the victims of arrogant and cruel restrictions, are the Poles. The talk follows:—

This evening I want to talk to you about the workers; those people engaged in making aeroplanes, munitions, guns and military equipment of every kind for the active prosecution of the war and also those occupied in the manufacture of machinery tools and all sorts of goods of a non-military character most of which are exported abroad to pay for vital imports and therefore can be called no less useful for the active prosecution of the war than guns or aeroplanes.

These men and women in Great Britain are more than ever before conscious of the value of their work and more than ever before detemined that it shall proceed at increasing speed and with growing efficiency.

Workers Mobilized

They are mobilized in the same way as are the men in the fighting services and perform a complementary task. But what cannot be mobilized, organized or in any way forced out of them is the spirit with which they perform that task and it is here that can be seen the telling difference between what the free democratic worker gives and what the Nazis find it impossible to compel from their serf labourer.

In Germany and occupied Europe in the same way as in Great Britain there are huge armies of industrial workers producing the weapons and sinews of war: but the picture North of the English Channel is very different from the picture to the South.

To the North there is free labour mobilized it is true, and organized to an ever-increasing ratio of production; but whose workers preserve in their daily lives and with every stroke of work they perform the tradition of civilized existence in their own homes.

To the South of the Channel there is forced labour, no better than slavery, drawn to a large extent from those races which have been so barbarously victimized by the Nazi lust for aggression: hostile sullen and hating what they do: the spirit of pride in achievement totally lacking, even among German workers whose view of victory is clouded by a despair at the preservation of all they wish to be free from, and who long for defeat.

Ever since the summer when the Nazis were able to start using aerodromes in France and in other countries they have overrun, the whole of Britain's industrial area has been brought within range of their bombers. So factories and plants everywhere have been subject to air attack and workers in all parts of the country have had to go on with their work while air battles are being fought overhead.

Determination Stiffened

The intensification of these attacks, however, has only served to stiffen the will of the British war workers and make them more determined that the raiders shall not be allowed to slow down the output of the war machine.

The result is that despite day and night raids Lord Beaverbrook, the Minister of Aircraft Production, is able to announce continuously, the attainment of new high levels of production in that industry. Such an achievement is a tribute to the grim doggedness of the workers themselves, for the increases have very frequently involved the voluntary surrender of privileges gained over a long period and personal sacrifices in the face of greater risks than those facing most other people.

Many vital industries must keep going day and night and every moment saved, when raids are threatening, goes to increase the efficiency of wartime production; so workers "watchers" have been introduced who deep a look-out for approaching aircraft.

After a general air raid warning has been given when the normal civil population takes to the shelters, work continues and stops only when there is immediate danger to the factory concerned.

In many industries, too, by a spontaneous effort the workers have been able to increase their output to such an extent as to make up for the loss on shifts subject to air raid delays.

These measures, providing as they do, a foil to the attempts of the Nazis to dislocate Great Britain's war production are the voluntary answer of men and women fully conscious that they are the centre of attack.

Trade Unions' Part

The trade unions are playing an important part not only in the organization of labour but also in the planning of industrial expansion and they have in Mr. Ernest Bevin, the Minister of Labour and National Service, one of the most successful Ministers in Mr. Churchill's Government.

So confident, are they of the ultimate result of the war that the Trade Unions have already begun to look ahead to the problems that will arise when the war is over.

To the workers of the nations groaning under the heel of tyranny this advance of the British workers along the road of progress, this response to the vital needs of the moment is an inspiration and a token of the better days that lie ahead.

But if British workers are confident to look ahead they are not for one moment relaxing their efforts in the grim struggle in which they are engaged.

Many have lost their lives, suffered grievous injury, seen their homes destroyed and their families rendered homeless but they have not flinched, and as the many stories you have heard and pictures you have seen, even out here make plain, they feel a comradeship in this with their King and Queen and with their leaders who go freely among them experiencing the same dangers as they do. "Good old Georgie" you will hear as the King goes by and "go it! Winnie" when they see the Prime Minister, a leader in whom they feel confidence as one who understands them.

Nazi Creed Condemned

Their reaction to the Air Blitz is an increased contempt for a creed which, as the Transport and General Workers Union, one of the largest and most sorely hit in Britain, declares "glorifies these attacks brutally directed against defenceless men and women and children." This Union whose members daily display a heroism unshaken by the horrors of unrestricted bombing speaks with justifiable pride of the "spirit of bravery and unselfish services rendered by all those contributing in any way to the carrying on of the essential services of the country."

Thus in a united effort the workers are not only spurring the national effort but by their courage in the face of danger, are showing those qualities they share with our sailors soldiers and airmen.

Turn, now to the German "Labour Front." From every country they have invaded, the Nazis have deported workers to Germany to work for their war machine. Even if they had won, they would still continue this form of slavery, for they have let it be known that in their "New Order" for Europe Germany would have the monopoly of industrial development, the key to modern military and political power; and the other countries would be deindustrialized and become mere German colonies supplying agricultural raw materials and labour contingents for German industry.

From Poland they take men, women and children by open compulsion and decree. From their Western victims they drain off the workers by a device. Their invasion having brought economic ruin and unemployment, they scrap all labour safeguards in the conquered land and offer no alternative but work on their terms for Germany.

Czech Organizations Dissolved

In Czecho-Slovakia, despite all his promises Hitler has long ago robbed the Czech workers of all their rights. Trade and co-operative organizations have been dissolved and their funds confiscated.

In many places the workers have been driven out from better paid positions and replaced by Nazis. Czech workers have been taken to Germany where they have to perform all the hardest and most dangerous work. On July 18 "Der Neue Tag" reported that more than 100,000 Czech workers were then employed in the Reich. The Protectorate Government decreed that "in order to ensure the carrying out at the proper time of urgent agricultural work" the Labour Office would be empowered to conscript able bodied persons between the ages of 16 and 60. The laws for the protection of youth in the Czechoslovakian glass industry introduced by the Republic have been cancelled because "the number of young people in that industry is relatively great as compared with the number of adults."

In Poland the first act of the Nazi Governor was to issue a Decree for the introduction of compulsory labour for the Polish population between the ages of 18 and 60, later this was extended to include those between the ages of 14 and 18. A million Polish workers were promised for German agriculture and industry and it is certain that at least this number have been sent to the Reich. It is equally certain, too, that the conditions promised by the German Minister of Labour, of protection similar to that enjoyed by German workers, facilities for sending their earnings home, etc., have never been fulfilled.

Polish Enslavement

The enslavement of the Polish population was doubly necessary from the Nazi point of view for not only did they want the workers in Germany but also they had expelled the population from their properties in Western Poland, to make way for the settlement of some 200,000 Germans brought in from the Baltic countries and Volhynia and Galicia.

In Poland itself the workers are at the mercy of a clique of Nazi officials and employers who can conscript them, draft them where they will, pay them such wages and work them such hours as they like. It is significant that the Nazis have given the name of the "First General Regency of the Third Reich" to German-occupied Poland.

Their aim is to add regions in other parts of the world to those now under their yoke: and in doing so to reduce the populations to slavery.

A Swiss journalist reported from Berlin that by a decree of Himmler all Poles working in Germany must wear a distinctive badge on their clothing. Germans are warned always to keep Poles at a distance. "A Pole is, and remains a Pole," says this decree. "Any attempt at familiarity must be rebuffed. Intimate relations with Poles cannot be reconciled with the dignity of a German."

Here are some of the typical regulations applying to forced foreign labour in Germany:—

To remain indoors between 9 p.m. and 5 a.m.

Not to use any public conveyance.

Not to visit any German institution of a cultural, ecclesiastical or social character and of course not to have any of their own.

Not to visit inns or restaurants except at certain hours when Germans may not enter.

The Nazi View

A German newspaper recently had an article on the employment of Polish labour which said "The Polish labourer is not our comrade: he may however rest assured that his needs will be satisfied for the sake of the material advantages which we expect to obtain from his efforts."

Even in Denmark which has felt the weight of Nazi oppression less than any other country, the relation between living costs and wages has been abolished: and Danish workers have been conscripted for Germany.

From Holland, from Norway, from Belgium and from France, come the same stories of regimentation within the country and forced labour: of the ruin of industry within those countries except in so far as it is required by and used for Germany and the conscription of the population to provide food for Germany to the total disregard of their own needs.

Sabotage is rife and martyrdom the only alternative to a soul-destroying serfdom.

In these countries and in Germany itself where the murmur of the oppressed is never heard, though ready for expression, vast armies are required to guard against revolt.

To those people then who look upon men as cattle, as creatures only to be moved about and set to work for their purposes, to the Nazis, we oppose the ideal of man's nobility and right to freedom; and in closing my talk tonight I cannot do better than quote to you the words of the XVIIIth-Century English poet George Herbert:—

Berlin Anxious for Diplomatic Success

Waning German Prestige Among Neutrals

London, Nov. 17.

The feverish diplomatic activity in which Germany has been indulging suggests that she is anxious to proclaim a succes in the international sphere that will revive the waning prestige of the Axis among neutrals, writes Reuters' diplomatic correspondent.

It is not yet certain which country is to be cast in the chief part in the new German scheme.

Spain, France and Russia have been approached, but hitherto German propagandists seem to have failed to secure the desired collaboration of General Franco, Marshal Petain or M. Viacheslav Molotov in the title role.

There is singularly little evidence, the correspondent continues, that the talks between Hitler and M. Molotov did more than review Soviet-German relations, and it is believed unlikely that anything will transpire in regard to the Berlin talks.

Meanwhile, the fact that Senor Serrano Suner, Spanish Foreign Minister, has been invited to Berlin again to see Herr Joachim von Ribbentrop, German Foreign Minister, suggests that German diplomacy may be turning once more towards Spain.

There is no confirmation of the report that Herr von Ribbentrop is going to visit Count Ciano, Italian Foreign Minister, in the course of the next day or two.

In the present state of Axis relations, the correspondent adds, it is more likely to suggest that Count Ciano will be summoned to Berlin if any exchange of views was to take place.—Reuter.

British Steel Supplies And Distribution

British purchases of iron and steel in the United States have been substantially increased in recent months in order (a) to make good the loss of Continental supplies; (b) to compensate for the fall in domestic output caused by air raids; and (c) to Steel Control to accumulate stocks against an emergency, states "The Economist."

The landed price of American products, however, is substantially higher than that of domestic materials, and it is reported that the industry's compensation fund may soon be increased by a further advance in domestic prices.

On the whole supplies are at present adequate for essential purposes but it has been found desirable to amend the distribution scheme, introduced last April, in order to prevent the diversion of steel to unessential purposes. The main provisions of the scheme, was designed to provide the machinery for equating demand with supply during quarterly periods, have been left unchanged.

Control of Supplies

The use of department symbols, period of delivery numbers, and iron and steel control licences is retained. Symbols that can only be authorized by a Government Department, and period numbers, with tonnages, must be quoted by all consumers when placing orders with finished steel manufacturers.

When there is no direct authorization from a Government Department, a licence (which automatically includes a Board of Trade symbol) is required from the Iron and Steel Control: this must be quoted instead of the Department authorization. The amendments to the scheme are expected to tighten still further the control of supplies.
